75 Officers Trail Sniper; Fear He Will Strike Again

Five Suspects Held
Boy Shot in Accident
Footprint Is Clew
Shells Link Crimes

The greatest manhunt Washington has known in a decade was under way last night, the quarry being a maniacal killer in a "khaki uniform and slouch hat," who, prowling in the Rock Creek Park area, has killed two and wounded two in the last week.

Seventy-five Washington detectives and policemen, a force of Montgomery County, Md., officers and a smaller force of United States park policemen sought the "sniper," fearful that he would strike again unless he was apprehended.

Five suspects were under arrest, but police admitted that they were suspects and nothing more.

Boy Shot by Accident

A 12-year-old boy was accidentally shot in the excitement and fear that spread over the northern environs of the city. He was Joseph Steer, son of Henry B. Steer, of 6315 Florida street, Chevy Chase, Md. Mr. Steer, before leaving his home loaded his revolver and placed it on a cupboard shelf so that it would be available to his wife in case of need.

Jean Steer, Steer's 10-year-old daughter, accidentally brushed the gun from the shelf, and as it hit the floor it exploded, the bullet striking Joseph in the arm and hip. The boy was taken to Georgetown University Hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of Washington detectives, told his men at roll call last night that the man they were after was a "vicious killer," and he warned them to be careful if they encountered him.

Robbery Incidental

Police were agreed that the sniper was the most dangerous criminal to break the peace hereabouts in many a year. Robbery apparently is incidental with him. A homicidal maniac, his chief aim is to kill. In every instance he has fired his gun until it was empty.

The investigators had three clews to work on last night—a footprint, the wallet of the maniac's latest victim and fingerprints found on the victim's automobile. Fingerprints were found on the wallet, too.

This evidence—if evidence it proves to be—was gathered after the sniper had murdered Peter F. Murray, 60, of the 7500 block of Fourteenth street northwest, and wounded Edna L. Brown, 40, of the 1300 block of Harvard street northwest, late Thursday night.

They had stopped on Grubb road, just off the East-West highway, when the man jumped on the running board of the automobile. After taking Murray's wallet, which contained $5, he fired 11 shots into the car, five of which entered

Girl Wins Right To Wear Pants in Los Angeles Court

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Helen Hulick, pretty kindergarten teacher who faced jail in defense of her right to wear pants (slacks) wherever she pleased, even in Municipal Court, won approval of the appellate department of the Superior Court of aCliforni today.

Her appeal from a Municipal Court ruling that she was in contempt of court for wearing slacks in a courtroom, despite judicial frowns, was upheld. The court ruled she was within her rights in so appearing before Municipal Judge Arthur S. Guerlin.

11 Die as 100,000 Jam Palace To See Body of Kemal Ataturk

Lieut. Sabiha Gokoen, shown here, 24-year-old woman flier and adopted daughter of Kemal Ataturk, Turkey's late president, was sent to Ankara, to recover from deep grief which led her to vow she would fast and follow her foster-father to the grave

By the Associated Press.

Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 18.—Eleven persons died today as crowds estimated at 100,000 sought to enter the Dolma Bagatche Palace to pay a final tribute to the late President Kemal Ataturk, whose body lay in state.

Most of the casualties were women. Besides the dead there were many persons badly injured, while the number of those who fainted in the crush could not be estimated.

Approximately 300,000 persons were believed by officials, who vainly sought to maintain order here, to have passed the dictator's bier yesterday. Such a tribute to a leader's memory was regarded by these observers as unprecedented in Turkish history.

Lieut. Sabina Gokoen, 24-year-old woman flier, who was the adopted daughter of Ataturk, was reported to be recovering slowly from the profound melancholy into which his death plunged her. She is at Ankara and physicians have hopes that she will now forego her vow to fast so she might follow her foster-father to the grave.

WPA Puts Up $3,586,561 For Airport

Work to Begin Today
Roosevelt to Watch
Flags, Markers at Site

The Works Progress Administration yesterday allocated $3,586,561 as its share in construction cost of the Gravelly Point Airport, for which the Public Works Administration has already earmarked $6,300,000.

President Roosevelt is expected at 3 p. m. today to witness inauguration of work on the $10,000,000 terminal project, designed to give the District facilities for air travel equal to any in the world.

At the site flags and markers have been set up to indicate locations of the runways on the landing field as well as areas to be occupied by the administration building, hangars and the headquarters building for the Civil Aeronautics Authority which is supervising the construction work.

The Presidential party is expected to view the beginning of the construction operations from high land between the Mount Vernon Highway and the Potomac River bank.

After the signal to begin work has been given an Army dredge, inactive since completion of routine channel improvements last summer, will start pumping hydraulic fill into the airport site.

Construction plans call for a controlled filling schedule which provide time for settling of the fill and yet permit field operations to get under way at the field in the spring of 1940. Under legislation which provided the public works funds the terminal must be "substantially completed" by June 30 of that year.

Chest Reaches Two-Thirds Of Its Goal

$1,375,400 Pledged
$250,000 Daily Needed
Drive to Be Redoubled

The Community Chest drive reached the two-thirds mark yesterday with pledges aggregating $1,375,400.90. Volunteer workers at yesterday's report luncheon were urged to redouble their efforts over the week-end, in preparation for the last three report days of the campaign.

Pledges of $250,000 daily are necessary for the remainder of the drive if the campaign is to reach its goal of $2,127,000, Herbert C. Willett, Chest director, revealed yesterday. The average gift this year is larger than last year, he said.

The campaign's youngest solicitor, eKith Gossman, 15 years old and small for his age, who belongs to the Boys Club volunteer team in the Southeast area of the Metropolitan union, reported 250 per cent of the individual quota assigned to him.

Many Increase Pledges

William J. Flather, jr., general chairman of the campaign, called attention to outstanding increases believed due to better understanding on the part of givers. He cited one "customary" pledge, which he said has been increased from $100 to $2,000, and another from $500 to $2,000.

A well-planned campaign based on education of the giving public and sheer hard work of the volunteer organization, and "without any elemeint of coercion," Flather emphasized, is the program on which

Cherry Trees' Fate Is Left Up to Congress by President

Congress appeared last night to be the court of last resort in the civic campaign to prevent erection of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in West Potomac Park, blooming grounds of the Japanese cherry trees.

Unperturbed by yesterday's "chain gang" demonstration by 150 Washington clubwomen, many of whom shackled themselves to trees and succeeded in putting a stop to transplanting for the day, President Roosevelt flatly refused to interfere with present plans to start work on the memorial within a few weeks.

The declaration of his position, which was not unexpected, means that the only avenue of hope left to objectors is Congress. That body could, after it convenes in January, either discharge the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission or refuse to appropriate additional funds for the disputed project.

Since Congress already has allotted $500,000 for construction and pigeonholed bills by Representative Scott (Democrat), California; Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, and others which were designed to block the scheme, the outlook is anything but bright for even last-ditch crusaders.

The President's statement, in which he accused the owner of two local newspapers of conducting a campaign of misconception, was delivered at his press conference simultaneously with the women's descent upon the Tidal Basin, where workmen were removing a number of trees and bushes preparatory to transplanting.

The tree lovers' demonstration was organized by the publisher referred to by President Roosevelt.

His press conference was well under way when Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, who had just been noti-

Prison Hint Delays Trial Of Warrings

Counsel, Judge Confer
Jurors Bewildered
Tax Agent Is Witness
Questioned by Justice

Fearful that the jury trying the Warring gang for conspiracy would hear from the witness stand that Charles (Rags) Warring, trigger man of the Foggy Bottom outfit, did time in Atlanta for shooting a liquor runner, defense counsel stopped the trial yesterday for an anxious conference with Justice Laws.

"Where did you interview Mr. Charles Warring?" District Attorney Pine asked William H. F. Swain, Treasury Intelligence agent, who described the numbers operators' long efforts to make their income tax returns come out even.

Instantly former District Attorney Rover, counsel for Gordon L. R. Sadur, a defendant, leaped to his feet. "May we come to the bench, your honor," he pleaded. He was joined by the other defense lawyers, who also rose.

Jury Bewildered

Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson gathered before Justice Laws. Rover, speaking for his colleagues, put a whispered question. The 11 men and one woman on the jury stared in bewilderment while the lawyers argued. Swain was called into the huddle. Justice Laws finally settled the matter with a gesture and low-voiced ruling.

"In Atlanta, Georgia," replied Swain, as the hearing resumed. He made no reference in his testimony to the detail that the address was the Federal Penitentiary there, or to the fact that among those at the interview was the captain of the prison guard.

Had the "Rags'" prison record crept into the evidence, there might have been grounds for a defense mistrial motion, such as terminated the first trial of James Hines, Tammany leader, for conspiracy in New York recently.

Bribes Alleged

Bribes paid police officers by the numbers operators have repeatedly been alleged in the testimony upon which the Government hopes to convict the Warrings — Emmitt, 33; "Rags," 30, and Leo Paul, 35—their tax expert, Sadur, and his junior partner, and brother-in-law, Henry L. Scherr, of conspiring to defraud the Treasury of the income tax on numbers profits.

The mere2word "protection" yesterday provoked defense counsel into furious objections, which led to Justice Laws himself taking over the examination of a witness in an effort to develop specific information about the bribes paid by the Warrings out of the $4,000,000 that went through their hands in two and a half years.

"Objection, your honor," Rover exclaimed as soon as Pine uttered the word, "protection." He argued that the question was leading.

"I will overrule that," said the court. Justice Laws, however, then

D. C. Hunter Bags 257-Pound Bear In Virginia Chase

A party of hunters yesterday bagged a 257-pound black bear after an hour's chase through hilly country north of Stokesville, Va., close to the West Virginia border.

David St. John, an employe of the Capital Transit Co., accompanied by R. N. Dickens and William Barnum, both of Manassas, spotted the bear, a 3-year-old cub, at the foot of the cliff.

"As soon as he saw us he lit out," St. John said. "He climbed up and down the cliffs for nearly an hour as we chased him, and we couldn't get in a shot. Finally, when we cornered him, he turned on one of our dogs and caught him by the head. Then I shot him through the backbone."

The dog is none the worse for the experience, St. John said.

Forest Fire Roars Over California On 50-Mile Wind

Upland, Calif., Nov. 18 (A.P.).—Southern California's worst forest fire in years, roaring along on a 50-mile wind, swept 8,000 acres of virgin timber today in the Mount Baldy section of the Angeles National Foroest.

At no point along the fire's four-mile front were the flames reported under control.

Scores of reforestation experts and laborers were forced to flee for their lives as two camps in the San Dimas experimental forest northwest of Mount Baldy were wiped out.

Roosevelt Urges U. S. Extend Visas for German Refugees; Berlin Calls Envoy Home

Dieckhoff to Report
Reich's Press Angry
Attitude Held 'Queer'
Pogroms Continue

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—The Nazi government suddenly called home its Ambassador in Washington today for a personal report on what is regarded here as unfavorable American reactions to anti-Jewish outbursts.

The summons to Dr. Hans Dieckhoff followed so closely Washington's similar request to Hugh R. Wilson, United States Ambassador to Germany, that even the average German who ordinarily disregards such moves began to realize all was not well between the two capitals.

DNB, the official German news agency, said "the ambassador will inform the foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, in detail concerning the queer attitude toward events in Germany of a domestic nature which is apparent from declarations by Roosevelt and other authoritative personalities in the United States of America."

(President Roosevelt said in a press conference Tuesday that news of anti-Jewish violence in Germany profoundly shocked American public opinion.)

DNB called the American leaders' attitude "eigenartig"—of a queer or strange nature.

Official spokesmen emphasized Dr. Dieckhoff was "coming to report—nothing more," but declined to predict how long he would stay here, whether he would return, or whether the Government would leave his post unfilled indefinitely.

It was known, however, that reports of the German embassy in Washington "showed" so "slackly" American reaction to the wave of violence in Germany, following last week's assassination of a German diplomat by a Jew in Paris, that a personal report by the Ambassador was deemed necessary.

May Sail Tuesday

(A German embassy secretary in Washington said Dr. Dieckhoff might leave New York Tuesday—in which case his boat would pass that of Ambassador Wilson, who was ordered home November 14 for "consultation.") Wilson sailed today from Le Havre, France, aboard the S. S. Manhattan for New York.

It had been expected generally that Germany would not ask Dieckhoff to come home until after Wilson had made his report to President Roosevelt.

Nazi officials, meanwhile, faced other problems:

France Reports Huge Fire, Blasts At Barcelona

Paris, Nov. 18 (A.P.).—Havas (French news agency) said in a dispatch from Cartagena, Spain, tonight the Spanish government naval radio announced a huge fire had broken out in Barcelona, accompanied by heavy explosions.

The raido announcement included a note from the government's defense ministry and was read at 11 p. m. (6 p. m., E.S.T.).

Premier Juan Negrin was said to have gone to the scene of the fire and ordered an immediate inquiry into its cause.

C.I.O. Loses Fight To Quash Libel Suit for $1,000,000

Justice Bailey rejected yesterday in District Court the contention of the Committee for Industrial Organization that it was immune to a $1,000,000 libel suit because it is an unincorporated organization.

The court, however, quashed the service on the C.I.O. chairman, John L. Lewis, obtained by the National Association of Industrial Insurance Agents. Fifteenth and H streets northwest, on the theory that he was also an officer of another group. Justice Bailey said that he was not satisfied that Lewis was an agent for the United Office and Professional Workers who were named defendants with the C.I.O. This left the C.I.O. the only defendant.

The insurance union asked $1,000,000 damages for statements it attributed to the C. I. O. that it was a "company union."

Roosevelt Held Ready to Ask 9,280 Planes

Johnson Reveals Plan
Would Quadruple Force
'Far Below Our Needs'

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 18.—The prediction that the United States must treble and perhaps quadruple its air force because of Europe's rearmament was voiced today by Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War.

Johnson said he believed President Roosevelt would ask Congress for upward of 9,280 fighting planes and termed the Army's present goal of 2,320 first line planes by mid-1940 "far below our immediate needs."

Johnson, speaking before the New England Council of Industrialists and Business Men, gave the first official outline of parts of the Administration's prospective armament program, including mobilization of industry.

Army Needs Listed

Among the outstanding Army needs listed by Johnson were:

Expansion and improvement of aviation research facilities, particularly at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and in California.

Manifold increase of the American aviation industry's productive capacity.

Immediate procurement of tanks, machine guns, semi-automatic rifles and anti-aircraft guns for the Army and National Guard.

Streamlining of Infantry and Cavalry divisions.

Building up reserves of munitions and equipment.

Training of industrial plants in production of war materials, including 55 "vital" items which have no counterpart in peacetime production.

Johnson said the War Department already had entered into mobilization contracts with more than 11,000 manufacturers.

Church Union Protests Nazi Persecutions

Letter Sent to Hull
Outrages Deplored
Prayers Tomorrow

The Washington Federation of Churches yesterday addressed to Secretary of State Hull a protest against Nazi persecutions "of both Jews and Christians in Germany" as it issued a general call for observance tomorrow of a day of prayer for the victims of racial and religious oppression.

Speaking for thousands of local churchmen, the federation explained that it wished to join the multitude of organizations throughout the United States in registering horror at th e anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic outrages.

"The church people of Washington feel very keenly about this situation," Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary, stated in the letter.

"We know that you have done everything which can possibly be done through your department relative to the matter and are not asking that you shall attempt anything further," he added. "But we do wish you to include our name in the list of those who are protest-

Nazi Execution Of 200 Jews in Camp Reported

Manchester, England, Nov. 18 (U.P.). The Manchester Guardian's diplomatic correspondent reported today he had learned "reliably" that 200 German Jews had been executed at the Buchenwald concentration camp.

The Guarian said it had been confirmed that 70 Jews were executed on the night of November 9, two days after the shooting in Paris of Ernest Vom Rath.

Japan Rejects U. S. Demands For Open-Door Policy in China

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Nov. 18.—Japan denied today, point by point, every charge in an American note demanding maintenance of the "open door" in China, and asserted "ideas and principles of the past" no longer apply to China's "new situation."

Japan's reply, answering a protest October 6 against "unwarranted interference" with American rights in China, was handed to Ambassador Joseph C. Grew.

The note had been long deliberated despite the United States' request for a prompt answer.

In each case where the United States charged interference or discrimination, Japan either denied such practices, offered counter arguments, or pleaded military necessity. The note concluded:

"In the face of the new situation, any attempt to apply to the conditions of today and tomorrow the inapplicable ideas and principles of the past neither would contribute to the peace of East Asia nor solve the immediate issues."

It frankly asserted Japan was engaged in establishing a new order in East Asia, and declared such a project was "an indispensable condition of Japan's very existence."

Authoritative quarters expressed belief Japan's note was a virtual declaration that Tokyo considered international agreements reached concerning China after the World War, particularly the nine-power treaty, obsolete.

Immediately after the United States protest, the Japanese press and political leaders emphasized Japan's insistence on dominance in Asia.

Responsible spokesmen indicated such pacts as the 1922 nine-power treaty, by which Japan, the United

Hull Makes Appeal
Taylor to Go Abroad
Cummings in Blast
Green Asks Boycott

By Robert C. Albright.

The State Department moved yesterday for a quick world solution of the German refugee problem as resentment against Nazi persecutions flared in another statement by the President and new labor demands for a German "boycott."

Secretary of State Hull said the refugee problem has redoubled in urgency, and asked Myron C. Taylor, former United States Steel corporation head, to return to London as this nation's spokesman on the Inter-Governmental Committee on Political Refugees.

All Must Participate

Hull said the refugee problem can be solved only "by all Governments actively participating in the search for such solutions." He said Taylor plans to sail from this country November 26.

President Roosevelt at his press conference proposed repeated six months extensions of stay for between 12,000 and 15,000 Germans and Austrians in this country on visitors' visas. He said it would be cruel and inhuman to force them to go back to Germany to face possible mistreatment and internment in concentration camps.

Cummings Shocked

Other developments:

Attorney General Cummings said Nazi action against minorities presents "a sordid picture and is as uncivilized as the cruelties of 19 centuries ago when Christians were fed to wild beasts." Cummings said recent happenings in Germany "shocked the conscience of the world" and showed "what happens when sheer brute force takes the place of reason."

In a radio broadcast, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, called on all in the labor movement "to redouble their vigilance in the boycott of German goods and German labor." Green urged the boycott continue "until the persecution of Jews in Germany is terminated and they are accorded their rights as human beings."

The calling of German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff back to Berlin for "consultation" brought little or no official comment. The President said he thought no comment was necessary. Secretary Hull said only that governments are constantly moving representatives back and forth. Dieckhoff may sail next Friday on the Europa.

"Urgency Redoubled"

Taylor was United States representative at the conference convoked by the President and Hull at Evian, France, when the permanent inter-governmental committee on political refugees was formed.

In announcing Taylor's return to London to take up the work of finding homes for thousands of refugee German Jews, Hull authorized reporters to quote him directly as follows:

"Developments in the last few days in Germany have redoubled the urgency of finding new homes for hundreds of thousands of persons. This Government already has given attention to these unfortunates to the full extent permitted by law.

"I am confident that these latest developments have brought home to those in authority in many other governments a vivid realization of the need of finding a solution to this problem, which can only be solved by all governments actively participating in the search for such solutions."

Hull said George Rublee, Amer-

Monopoly Quiz Will Picture Economic Shift

Patent Inquiry Follows O'Mahoney Begins Dec. 1 'Recital of Facts'

Portrayal of shifts in the Nation's "economic scene," closely followed by testimony on industrial patent controls, will be the President's monopoly committee's first offering at public hearings opening December 1.

Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney announced the national economic committee's December program of hearings following committee approval in executive session yesterday.

O'Mahoney said the Government's introductory statement of the national economic "picture" will be presented in the first three days of hearings by Dr. Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics; Dr. Willard Thorp, Dun & Bradstreet economist attached to the Commerce Department, and Leon Henderson, executive secretary of the monopoly committee.

Patent Inquiry to Follow

Following these preliminary statements, O'Mahoney said evidence will be presented by the Justice Department and subpenaed witnesses on the "use, distribution and pooling of patents" in the automobile and bottle glass industries. He said this study is designed to "show how control of patents affects the economic life of the country, favorably or unfavorably."

"All of the evidence won't be unfavorable," O'Mahoney said. "We might easily show, for example, that some patent pooling isn't disadvantageous to the public."

The chairman said patents were selected "because that study has proceeded more rapidly to conclusions than others." He said the hearings would bring out under questioning "such restrictions as the owner of a patent may place on the use or the price of a product."

The committee adopted a resolution unanimously declaring its purpose to collect and analyze through reports and hearings available facts "in an objective, unbiased, and dispassionate manner, and that it is the purpose of the committee to pursue its work solely from this point of view."

"Recital of Facts"

O'Mahoney added that hearings would be "not a recital of opinions, but of facts."

Explaining plans for a preliminary presentation by Lubin, Thorp and Henderson, he said the committee thought it would be helpful to have first this outline of industry and commerce, providing a "factual delineation of the economic status of the country" with emphasis on employment, pay rolls, production and distribution.

Henderson added:

"The economic presentation will undertake to provide a picture, not only as conditions are today, but economic growth over a long period. It will cover the performance record of American economy."

Henderson said the preview "will be pointed up to show the nature of the economic questions which will have to be answered before the committee is through with its work."

Dr. High Assails Lindbergh Plan To Live in Berlin

Portsmouth, Ala., Nov. 18 (AP).—Dr. Stanley High, noted author-lecturer, speaking before the Portsmouth Forum here last night, lashed out at Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his announced intention of remaining in Berlin this winter.

"Col. Lindbergh will never again be able to gain the good will and respect of the American public as a result of this action, and I do not feel that he is entitled to the respect of this country for his action."

Dr. High said "I wish I could offer some charitable explanation for Col. Lindbergh's action."

City Firm to Build Auto Testing Units

The Harwood-Nebel Construction Co., 1520 K street northwest, yesterday received contracts for construction of the two automobile testing stations authorized during the last session by Congress.

The local firm last week submitted a low bid of $99,594 for the work. Construction is expected to be started in about two weeks. One of the building is to be erected on the south side of F street southwest, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, and the other on West Virginia avenue northeast, near Mount Olivet road.

At the same time the Commissioners awarded contracts to the same firm for construction of a garage building for the City Refuse Division, which will be erected at First and O streets southwest, at a cost of $143,285.

Eig Liquor Store Wins Window Prize

Samuel Eig, proprietor of Eig's Liquor Store at 5416 Georgia avenue northwest, and his employes have been awarded $3,500 for fourth place in a Nation-wide window display contest sponsored by the American Can Co., it was announced last night. Eig receives half the prize, while employes of the store share in the other half.

A prize of $250 was given to the Accommodation Liquor Co., 4907 Wisconsin avenue northwest, and $125 went to Mitchell's Liquor Store at 1122 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Goodwill Commission Meeting Here Today

The Training School Commission of Goodwill Industries will meet today through Monday at 1220 New Hampshire avenue northwest. William J. Kurth, of Boston, president of the National Association of Goodwill Industries, will attend.

The commission is composed of Dr. W. J. Helms, of Boston, founder of the industries; P. J. Trevethan, of Boston; W. Harold Snape, director, Washington Goodwill Industries; C. A. Friedman, and Mrs. Stanley Sears and James C. Dulin, trustees of the Washington organization.

C.I.O. Acclaims LewisPresident As Parley Ends

On Permanent Basis 30-Hour Week Asked Call for Housing

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 18.—The new C. I. O. emerged from the cheering and celebration of its first constitutional convention today carrying a broad program for political and economic action under the leadership of its militant champion, John L. Lewis, 58-year-old one-time coal miner.

Winding up the five-day gathering, the 519 delegates who set up the C. I. O. on a permanent basis as the Congress of Industrial Organizations, swept Lewis into the first presidency by thunderous acclamation.

Then with bands, horns and whistles blaring the convention rolled on to complete the new C. I. O. by electing Philip Murray, another former miner, and Sidney Hillman, former clothing worker, as vice presidents; James B. Carey as secretary, and 38 union officials to sit with the officers of C. I. O.'s executive board.

Sweeping through a mass of policy commitments, the delegates reaffirmed their stand for the organization of the unskilled workers in the mass production industries and called on C. I. O. leadership for an "unremitting campaign throughout every industry."

Sees Step for Peace

This co-ordination and the constitutional convention, Lewis predicted earlier, would be "the greatest step possible" for peace with the A. F. of L. by placing the C. I. O. on an equal footing.

Shifting their interest quickly from domestic to international affairs the convention approved a resolution calling on the United States to strengthen "democratic forces" in South and Central American countries against economic and political penetration there of "the Fascist empires—Germany, Italy and Japan."

The resolution proposed increasing American Government credits to Central and South American countries to stimulate inter-American trade and provide "a bulwark of American democracy in Central and South America to thwart economic and political penetration of the Fascist nations of Germany, Italy and Japan."

30-Hour Week Asked

The convention also called for a $5,000,000,000 low-cost housing program, the six-hour day, 30-hour week, a two-year public works program for an estimated 12,500,000 unemployed, and the repeal or court test of repressive labor legislation.

Responding to the acclaim that carried him into the presidency, Lewis, who also heads the United Mine Workers, largest of the 34 affiliated unions, declared:

"This election marks my transition from the role of an unscrupulous and tyrannical dictator to the role of a servant of a constitutional democracy, a constitutional labor movement—some chance for a dictator!"

Lewis said that if he failed to understand and carry out resolves and purposes of the C. I. O. convention, "no chamber of commerce and no association of manufacturers, no politician in this country need fear my influence . . ."

Pledge Bridges Aid

Fascism and Nabiism were criticized, but no mention was made of Communism. Lewis declined to comment on Washington reports that Chairman Dies of the House Committee investigating un-American activities had challenged the C. I. O. convention to take a stand on Communism.

The convention pledged its support to West Coast C. I. O. Director Harry Bridges and Harold Pritchett "in their fight against threatened exclusion from this country" by the Labor Department. Bridges has been served with a deportation warrant charging him with being a Communist, but action has been deferred pending a Supreme Coudt ruling on the question of Communist membership as grounds for deportation.

Detroit, Nov. 18, (AP).—The Detroit Free Press quoted sources close to the United Automobile Workers international headquarters as saying tonight that Homer Martin, president, soon will "round up his followers and sever connections with the Congress for Industrial Organizations."

Martin has objected to the board's ordering several of his aides dismissed and the paper said an open break may come between Martin and international officers with whom he has been at odds if they insist upon the dismissals being carried out.

President Leaves Cherry Tree Fate Up to Next Congress

Cherry

fied by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, came in to inform the President that a number of women were padlocking themselves to the Japanese cherry trees.

They're Almost Transplanted

The Chief Executive's response was to announce that if they persisted, they would be picked up alon with their arboreal affinities and transferred to the transplantation site.

Finnan had been apprised of the mass descent by a park policeman. He drove down to the "front" and heard a chorus of female voices chanting: "We want Finnan."

He did not get out of his car, but turned about to carry the news to the White House. When he returned to the Tidal Basin, most of the women had dispersed, leaving their chains and padlocks behind. Finnan then got out and addressed the crusaders still on the premises.

Opinion of President

Saying that the public has been subjected, by the owner of the newspapers, to the worst case of "flim-flamming" Washington has seen in a long time, the President pointed out that there are, but 83 trees on the site of the memorial proper which must be removed.

He emphasized that erection of the monument to Jefferson does not mean elimination of the Capital's annual blossom display but, on the other hand, the spring exhibition will be better than ever since 1,000 new trees are to be set out.

Carefully shielding the clippings from the gaze of his press audience, the President read headlines which gav conflicting figures on the number of trees affected.

There are now 1,700 cherry trees in East and West Potomac Parks, he said, and if present plans materialize there will be 2,700 in the not distant future. He pointed out that the species is short lived anyway, that it is necessary to transplant 40 or 50 every year whether a memorial is going up or not.

President Wants Memorial

Now waxing humorous and again taking a serious tone, the President allowed no room for doubt that he wishes to see a memorial to the most revered Democrat erected in Washington and that the proper site is the one chosen by the special commission.

It is now too late to pick another location, he said, going on to express his satisfaction with the Pantheon-type design which has been approved.

Picking up a sheaf of memoranda and clippings, he quoted Al Smith's celebrated remark, "Let's look at the record," and proceeded to review the Jefferson Memorial question from its beginning. He predicted that when he returns to Washington he will find a fine monument rising on the Tidal Basin and 1,000 more cherry trees.

"What year do you expect to come gack?" someone asked.

Laughingly, the parrying reply came that it would be early and often.

Displeasure Is Evident

Several times he used the expression "flim flam" to express his displeasure with the cherry tree campaign conducted by the two newspapers referred to previously. Lapsing into another of his frequent gay moods, he explained that he is a "Dutchess County kick" who knows something about trees.

When he pointed out that there are only 88 trees on the site to be occupied by the memorial, the President did not mention that there are 81 others which also must be removed to make way for grading and approaches.

Shortly after the press conference a committee of the American Association of Nurserymen called at the White House to volunteer to furnish as many cherry tree replacements as will be needed.

Park Officials Relieved

Park officials, even though many of them privately object to locating the massive marble memorial in a park now devoted to shady lanes, tennis courts and baseball diamonds, were relieved by the President's statement because they feel it means that less pressure will be placed on them by citizen objectors from now on.

Bids for the excavation contract will be opened Monday by the National Parks Service, agent for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission. Digging should be under way before Congress convenes January 3.

An embattled, red-haired clerk in the Bureau of Internal Revenue came to The Post last night to suggest a strike by government workers as a gesture which might prevent work from getting started.

"Why, if only 90,000 of us stayed away from our offices Monday," he said, "it would be enough to show we mean business."

The Forest Hills Citizens Association will present a resolution attacking construction of the memorial at the Tidal Basin to the District Commissioners today.

The resolution was composed by Col. Francis Key Smith, attorney and association member.

Asks Critics to Join Be 'For' U. S. System Not 'Against' 'Isms

Education and recreation programs of the Works Progress Administration should become active forces behind the teaching of democracy, in the opinion of Mrs. Roosevelt, who presided at a joint conference of State directors of the two WPA divisions yesterday afternoon at the Washington Hotel.

Mrs. Roosevelt expressed belief that fascism and communism should not be fought with programs designed specifically for that purpose. Educational programs should be "for" democracy rather than "against" any other form of government, she said.

Asks Critics to Join

Asked how to allay public sentiment when "we are accused of teaching fascism or communism just because we have let them be discussed on our programs," Mrs. Roosevelt suggested the critics be made a part of the programs. Nothing teaches a person so quickly what is being done as the opportunity to participate in the doing of it, she said.

In any event, she declared, she would not close down a program because of such criticism—as that would look suspicious, she said.

Questions Leaders Closely

She questioned the State leaders closely as to whether they had noticed "any wave of fear" for democracy in their regions. The answers were that attacks on democracy had brought about a revival of enthusiasm for it. Leaders stressed that the attacks worth noting had come wholly from other countries and not from groups operating in America.

The fear that the country might become too radical seems to have about equal weight with the fear that it might become too conservative, leaders told Mrs. Roosevelt.

Reaction Split On British and Canadian Pacts

Follows Party Lines Textile Leader Bitter 4 More Deals Pending

By the Associated Press.

Administration officials yesterday studied bitter criticism and warm praise of the new trade agreements with Great Britain and Canada for indications of opposition and support they may expect in efforts to negotiate four other such pacts in the near future.

The mutual tariff reductions agreed to Thursrday with Britain and Canada evoked charges, on the one hand, that the Administration had "traded away employment," and predictions, on the other, that every American home would benefit.

Initial comment in Congress was generally along party lines, but it was too limited to give an accurate indication of reaction that may be registered in the session beginning n January.

Four Other Deals Pending

State Department officials were hopeful that British and Canadian acceptance of Secretary Hull's cherished policy of bargaining down international trade barriers would encourage Argentina, Australia, the Union of South Africa and New Zealand, among others, to negotiate similar treaties with this Government.

Exploratory discussions have been carried on already with all four countries. Discussions with Argentina have been apparently dormant, however, since they encountered difficulties over Argentina's foreign exchange policies.

Outlook for formal negotiations with Australia, which once was placed with Germany on the United States' economic blacklist because of alleged discrimination against American goods, is believed to be good.

Experts said manufactures are major items of United States export to all four countries.

Textile Leader Critical

Among critics who spoke out yesterday against the new agreement with Great Britain was Russel T. Fisher, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers.

"In granting tariff concessions on cotton yarns and cloth to the United Kingdom, the administration has traded away employment in textiles," Fisher said in a statement at Boston. "The cotton textile industry in the United States is to be penalized for its high standards."

But in New York, Arvid L. Frank, chairman of the trade agreements committee of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, decalred:

"There is not a home in America that will not be benefited, directly or indirectly, by this agreement, which tends to stress some of the greatest returns of foreign trade—the indirect benefits."

Wallace, King Laud Program

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, in a speech for delivery last night at Durham, N. C., praised the trade agreements program, but expressed the opinion it could not make any substantial contribution toward a solution of the cotton problem.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, a critic of some Administration policies, commented he believed the new treaties would be of indirect benefit to international trade in many articles of commerce not directly affected by their terms.

At Chicago, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, proclaimed the agreements another forward step in agriculture's uphill battle to secure economic balance.

Wall Street Noncommital

Wall Street, which translates its thoughts into prices on the stock exchange, proved noncommital. Although prices fell $1 to $3 a share, observers attributed the slump to the touchy international situation and the long price rise, not to the treaty.

R. H. Cabell, president of Armour & Co., commented that the trade agreement "in some particulars" should result in "benefits to the meat trade and to American livestock producers."

The United States aviation industry was pleased by Canada's reduction of duties on airplanes and engines.

As for the shoe industry, however, Maxwell Field, secretary of the New England Shoe & Leather Co., said in Boston that the general good which should result from the treaty would more than counteract a possible net loss for American footwear manufacturers.

Friday Morning Music Club presents the music section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase in Barker Hall. Louis A. Potter, director; Helen Grimes, accompanist; Ruby Potter, assisting soprano soloist.

Beginning its fifty-third season as an organization, the Friday Morning Music Club entertained its guests in Barker Hall yesterday with a program of choral music sung by the Music Section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., under the direction of Louis A. Potter, with Helen Grimes as accompanist. The visitors from over the border were cordially welcomed by a large audience, and received their due meed of applause for ensemble singing which showed the spirited interest behind their careful training.

In the opening group were heard Bach's "My Heart Ever Faithful," the chorus, "Lift Thine Eyes," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah;" Purcell's "In These Delightful Groves," and Brahms' "Ave Maria." Particularly enjoyable for tonal coloring and balance of voices was the Purcell selection.

The second group, arranged in the imaginative cycle of a day, contained Cuthbert Harris' "Noon," Salter's arrangement of Amy Woodforde-Finden's "How Softly Runs the Afternoon," Deems Taylor's choral vocalise, "Valse Airette;" William Clifford Heilman's "Night Song," and Sir Georg Henschel's "Morning Hymn."

Harvey Alexander Matthews' melodically attractive cantata, "The Slave's Dream," brought the program to a close. George A. Meyers, who was to have sung the tenor sole, was unable to be present, and Mrs. Ruby Potter volunteered to take his place.

Green Asks 2 Officials to Quit Recount Suit Filed in Indiana

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asked yesterday for the resignations of two Pennsylvania Federation officials because they "opposed the political policies of the A.F.L., in the last (election) campaign."

WILLIAMS

The officials were James McDevitt, president of the State Federation, and Dave Williams, secretary.

In a letter requesting the resignations, Green told the men they had supported the same candidates in the November 8 election as C.I.O., and had been "repudiated" by the voters. The Pennsylvania Federation disregarded Green's endorsement of Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, who successfully sought re-election over Gov. H. Earle, Democrat.

Kansas City, Nov. 18 (AP).—The list of election workers indicted for "ghost" voting, ballot box stuffing and entimidation at the 1936 general election was raised by 18 to 275 today—and the Federal Government announced its job was about finished.

The last of the four grand juries asked to make widespread investigations of the vote scandals returned indictments against 18 persons and Maurice Milligan, U. S. District Attorney, whose prosecution decord in the cases has not contained one acquittal, said no further extensive probes were planned. Two hundred and thirty-seven persons have been convicted either by plea or trial.

Indianapolis, Nov. 18 (AP).—The first of at least five recount suits through which 12 Republican candidates for State offices hope to reverse last week's Democratic victories was filed today in Vandedburgh circuit court.

Judge John W. Spencer set December 6 for the start of the recount. The petitions, charging fraud, were filed by Joseph Iglehart, Evansville attorney, and Robert D. Armstrong, of Indianapolis, chairman of the legal committee named to act for the Republican State committee.

Court Orders Recount in Maryland Race

Ellison Made Request Held Machines Untried Rep. Kennedy Victor

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 18.—Judge Eugene O'Dunne, of the Baltimore Supreme Court, ordered a recount today of the vote by which Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, was re-elected, defeating Daniel Ellison, Republican.

Kennedy is in line for the chairmanship of the District of Columbia Committee of the next session. The chairmanship carries with it the title "unofficial Mayor of Washington."

Judge O'Dunne termed as "legalistic and not common sense" a contention of the board of election supervisors that Ellison should be denied a recount because Federal laws provide only the House of Representatives can pass on contests as to election of its members.

Ellison had asked a recount of the votes cast on voting machines in Baltimore—where the Fourth Congressional District is wholly located—on grounds the machines were new and untried and totals should be verified. The totals showed his defeat by Kennedy by 290 votes.

Judge O'Dunne, in an opinion ordering a review of the count declared:

"All that is asked is an opportunity to see and read the figures in the back of the machines that are supposed to be automatic and fraud-proof devices. The examination might encourage Daniel Ellison, apparently defeated candidate, to carry the contest to Congress. It might discourage him.

"There is no need to await the indefinite action of an inert Congress."

Tax Snooping Order for TVA Draws Fire

Step Held Dangerous Donahey Defends Plan Witnesses Grilled

By the Associated Press.

A caustic dispute over President Roosevelt's order permitting the TVA investigating committee to inspect income tax returns broke out yesterday at a committee hearing.

Two Republican members of the committee, Representatives Jenkins, of Ohio, and Wolverton, of New Jersey, termed the executive order an "unwarranted step" and "a dangerous precedent" involving rights of citizens.

This brought an emphatic protest from Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the group.

"I approved of it," Donahey said, his face reddening. "I think it is perfectly proper that these utilities be brought in here and made to show anything this committee wants them to show."

"And that goes for the TVA, too," he added.

Limit Questioned

Francis Biddle, committee counsel, explained that he asked the Presidential order to obtain records of depreciation claimed by the Tennessee Electric Co. Biddle said the committee sought facts on the stalemate in negotiations for sale of utility properties to TVA.

The Republican Congressmen said the Presidential order was not limited to any particular returns and opened all income tax data from 1925 to date.

Biddle assured them the committee would use only the utility company's returns and added that the form of executive order was "standard" for Government agencies and Congressional committees.

Late in the day Biddle differed sharply with two witnesses for utilities who contended that TVA rates are not a fair "yardstick" for the private power industry.

He disputed five days of testimony by Edward L. Moreland, dean of engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and witness for the Commonwealth & Southern Utility Co., that the yardstick rates would produce an annual deficit of more than $10,000,000.

C. W. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute, encountered sharp questioning by Biddle about purposes and aims of the trade association for the utility industry.

Biddle asked about thousands of pamphlets the institute distributed to colleges and high schools discussing public versus private ownership and operation of utilities. The committee counsel used the term "propaganda."

Kellogg protested this sharply.

"We call that (the distribution of pamphlets) dissemination of public information done in an above-board way that is entirely above criticism," he said.

Kellogg said that in his judgment the TVA was not economically justified and that its cost figures "obscure rather than illuminate" the issue of fair electric rates.

Ex-Police Aide In Court Today At Rockville

King to Be Arraigned
Assault Suspect Up
Identified by Girl

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

James R. King, former assistant in the office of the clerk of the Montgomery County police court, under indictment for embezzlement, and Edward W. Jackson, colored, of Washington, charged with assaulting and robbing Miss Helen Keindl, New York debutante, will be arraigned in Circuit Court at Rockville today.

The indictment on King will be arraigned contains 50 counts, 49 of them charging embezzlement of $1 each of county dog tax receipts and the fiftieth charging embezzlement of $49 from the same fund.

King was suspended by the board of county commissioners a year ago when auditors began an investigation of his accounts. Later he was indicted jointly with Harry W. Williams, police court clerk, on embezzlement charges, but when Williams was acquitted the case against King was nolle prossed.

Last June King was reindicted on four charges of embezzlement. The indictment on which he will be arraigned was returned by the grand jury Thursday.

The indictment against Jackson contains three counts charging robbery, assault with intent to rob and simple assault.

Jackson was arrested April 5 after a wild chase in which three shots were fired and his car wrecked. Miss Kiendl identified him as the man who stopped her car on a lonely road near Four Corners, Md., and grabbed her pocketbook. She fled through a wood and notified police.

At a Police Court hearing she testified she had "played hookey" from the Sarah Lawrence School at Bronxville, N. Y., to visit friends in the South, but changed her mind and was on her way back home when her car was stopped.

Miss Kiendl, daughter of a prominent New York attorney, made her debut last February.

Five 'Carriers' Are Traced in Prince Georges

All in Isolation
3 Diphtheria Cases
To Inoculate Class

Three diphtheria cases in the first grade at the Capitol Heights (Md.) School last month were traced to five "carriers" in the classroom, Dr. A. B. Hooton, Prince Georges County health officer, reported yesterday.

The "carriers," he said, have been isolated and preparations made for the entire class to be inoculated Monday.

The typhoid fever cases, one of which was fatal, developed in the county as the result of drinking polluted water, Dr. Hooton stated.

One case was in Cedar Heights, a colored residential community, where the health department a month ago described the drinking water facilities as inadequate. The Washington suburban sanitary commission was asked to extend water mains into this subdivision, but the work has not been started.

Dr. Hooten reported that work had been started on the county's new milk sanitation ordinance, but that "it probably will be January before the regulations can be fully enforced, due to the fact that a second sanitarian has not yet been appointed."

The county commissioners promised to provide an additional sanitarian at the time the ordinance became effective, October 1.

2 Markets Approved.

Some 150 farmers of Prince Georges and Charles Counties, Md., meeting last night at Upper Marlboro, voted to open tobacco auction markets in the two counties. April 1 was decided upon as the date for opening the markets at Upper Marlboro and Hughesville.

The meeting, one of a series to determine the opinion of southern Maryland farmers on the market question, was called by the Five-County Tobacco Growers' Committee, and was presided over by W. R. C. Connick, president of the Prince Georges Farm Bureau Federation. Meetings will be held in Calvert County November 22; in Charles County November 23, and in St. Mary's and Ann Arundel Counties at dates to be fixed.

Davey Gets Paid After Pension Tilt

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 18 (AP).—Gov. Martin L. Davey's complaint that he hadn't received his November 1 and November 15 salary checks was satisfied today.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson's office stak said the November 1 check was certified November 12—only after Davey gave orders for payment of old-age pensions—and the second went out on schedule.

Ferguson had threatened to hold up Davey's pay until Ohio pensioners received their money, which was delayed several weeks by the Governor's dispute with the Federal Social Security Board, and eventually was paid last week entirely from State funds.

Mrs. Chase, Former Slave, Dies at 94

Fugitive in 1862
Came to Capital
Known as 'Mother'

Mrs. Thomas Chase, born a slave, died yesterday after a brief illness, one of the oldest and most respected members of her community. She was 94 years old.

"Mother" Chase, as she was affectionately known, was active and interested in civic and church affairs until the past two weeks. She died at the home of her son, William T. Chase, 416 T street northwest.

In the spring of 1862 Anna Harrison, a frightened slave girl fugitive from cornfields of Carolina County, Va., arrived in the Capital. As she frequently recalled the times, when she heard that the old master and missus, and the young masters were killed, she gathered together her family and headed for the "Free State."

The "Free State," she used to explain, meant to slaves the territory behind Union lines. By oxcart her family went to Fredericksburg and boarded a train for Washington.

In Washington she met William T. Chase who had been a slave near Annapolis. He was trying to learn how to read. The two were married. Her husband drove a coal truck until his master learned he could read. Then he fired Chase.

But her husband continued reading and eventually graduated from Howard University. He later got a law degree and received his diploma from President Arthur.

In 1873 Chase was a member of the House of Delegates of the District under Governor Shepherd and put through a bill for a normal school. This opened higher education to negroes.

Throughout her life Mrs. Chase was active in civic affairs. She was an active member of the Electa Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, the United Order of Tents.

She was one of the founders 67 years ago of the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church. She will be buried from that church with the Rev. C. T. Murray officiating. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Isabel Payne, of New York City, and three sons, William T., Charles A. and Lewis E. Chase, all of Washington.

Nazi Pogroms Peril British Appeasement

Chamberlain Set Back 2 in Cabinet Critical Munich Accord Hit

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 18.—Britain found evidence today in a by-election and in addresses by two cabinet members that Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of appeasing Germany had been set back by the German campaign against Jews.

The Marquess of Zetland, secretary of state for India, and Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, indicated the appeasement plan had been impaired.

Chamberlain's adherents were startled by the smashing "popular front" defeat of a government candidate for the House of Commons in the Bridgewater constituency, traditionally a conservative stronghold.

Man-in-Street Angry

Some ascribed it to resentment of the man-in-the-street over Germany's anti-British press campaign and the outburst of anti-Semitism. The winner, Vernon Bartlett, an independent progressive, had opposed "the dangers of Prime Minister Chamberlain's foreign policy."

Bartlett, 44-year-old foreign affairs writer and radio commentator, defeated a Conservative, P. G. Heathcoat-Amory, 19,540 votes to 17,208. The Conservative Party won by a 10,569 majority in the previous Bridgwater election.

David Lloyd George, Britain's World War prime minister, telegraphed Bartlett his "congratulations on a resounding victory for British democracy. I think it an historic triumph."

Vindication for Eden

Bartlett called it a "quite definite defeat for Chamberlain policy and a victory for Eden policy." Anthony Eden resigned as foreign secretary last February 20 in disagreement with Chamberlain's plan of appeasing Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

This was the third government defeat in five by-elections since the four-power accord at Munich.

The Marquess of Zetland was the first member of the Chamberlain cabinet to lay Germany's new anti-Semitic drive squarely at the door of Hitler's government.

The marquess, speaking at a national government rally at Torquay, said violence of the past week in Germany had "rudely shaken" his hope the Munich agreement would open a new chapter in human history.

Cabinet Member Aghast

The marquess said the assassination of the Nazi diplomat which precipitated the violence was "detestable," and added

"But one stands aghast at the wholesale and vindictive retaliation against thousands of innocent persons in which the German government have thought fit to indulge."

Sir John Simon, addressing another government rally at Ryhl, echoed Lord Zetland's condemnation of the measures against Jews "who had no knowledge" of the assassination and "whose fate inevitably raises strong sentiments both of horror and of sympathy."

The chancellor of the exchequer indicated the German campaign had impaired "the better prospect" of the Munich accord.

"We should do no good service to the cause of better understanding and peaceful agreement if we did not recognize the reaction of world opinion," Sir John said.

Japan Rejects U. S. Demands Of 'Open Door'

Japan

States and seven other nations pledged respect for China's territorial integrity and independence, no longer would be considered binding on the Japanese empire.

Isn't Held Discriminating

In answer to the United States charges of violations of American business and property rights and accusation that Japan was attempting to monopolize Chinese trade through currency manipulation and pseudo-Chinese monopolies, Japan answered:

Exchange—" . . . These measures can not be construed as constituting any discrimination against American citizens . . . inasmuch as application of the measures makes no differentiation according to nationality they cannot be considered discriminatory measures."

Customs—" . . . New Chinese regimes some time ago effected revisions . . . to secure rational modification of the former tariff enfored by the Kuomintang (central Chinese) government . . . The schedule . . . is the one adopted by the powers in 1931 . . . No complaint has been heard from foreign residents of any nationality on the spot."

Do Not Oppose Participation

Promotion companies—" . . . Restoration and development of China's economic, financial and industrial life after the present affair is a matter of urgent necessity for the welfare of the Chinese . . . It is far from the thoughts of the Japanese government to impair the rights and interests of American citizens in China or discriminate against their enterprises. The Japanese government therefore does not oppose, but heartily welcomes participation of third powers on the basis of the new situation which has arisen . . .

"These enterprises are turned over to concerns that are ordinary Chinese or Japanese juridical persons, without any intention of allowing them to reap monopolistic profits by discrimination against America or any other power. . . ."

American citizens—" . . . In north China there is no restriction excepting very special cases . . . In the Yangtze Valley large numbers of Americans have already returned (to occupied areas). The reason that permission to return not yet has been made general is due to danger that persists . . . and also to the impossibility of admitting nationals of a third power on account of strategic necessities such as the preservation of military secrets."

Termed Definite Overthrow

By the Associated Press.

Informed persons termed Japan's note to this country yesterday a definite overthrow of the existing international treaties regarding China, such as the nine-power pact.

Observers believed the State Department would study the note and, in reply, would insist on the principles laid down in the American note to Tokyo on October 6. Japan's note today was the reply to that United States communication.

French Press Accords With Italy and Reich To Be Ready for Chamberlain Next Week

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Premier Daladier's government undertook today to hasten accords with Germany and Italy as steps toward quieting domestic and foreign disturbances.

The cabinet, meeting under President Albert Lebrun at the Elysee Palace, reviewed the foreign situation extensively in preparation for arrival here Wednesday of Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax of Great Britain.

The principal objective of both French and British ministers was understood to be completion of tariff pacts with Berlin and Rome to complement the Anglo-Italian accord and facilitate negotiations between London and Berlin.

Robert Coulondre, new Ambassador to Germany, entrained tonight for Berlin. Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, it was learned, informed the cabinet of recent conversations between Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Andre Francois-Poncet, French envoy to Rome.

The cabinet was reported to have discussed, without decision, the question of granting belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgents. Election results in the United States and the central European situation were reported to have been reviewed by Bonnet.

Bonnet reiterated the government's stand opposing cession of any French colonies to Germany. Since Germany has not formally demanded any such cession, it was believed the problem could be sidestepped in forthcoming French-English discussions.

After the cabinet meeting Bonnet conferred with Henri Berenger, French member of the intergovernmental committee on refugees, concerning relief for German Jews.

Publication of the Franco-German nonaggression accord, preparation of which was announced Tuesday, was declared in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies to be forthcoming soon, perhaps within the next 48 hours.

These sources said the agreement was "purely general" and "even less precise" than the declaration against war signed at Munich September 30 by Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Since Tuesday Premier Daladier has gone on record publicly as opposed to returning to Germany any of her prewar colonies and Radical Socialist Deputies of the Chamber, representing France's major party, which is headed by Daladier, adopted unanimously a resolution in effect denouncing Germany's anti-Jewish campaign.

The resolution said in part:

"France, a country free of racial prejudice, has considerably bettered the material, intellectual and moral situation of the people which it has taken in charge."

Daladier's party followers of the Chamber failed to vote unanimous approval of his "three-year plan" for rebuilding French finances, despite a personal appeal by the premier for 100 per cent backing. Nine of 112 deputies voted against him and 81 abstained.

Long Inquiry Ends With No Trace of Hawaii Clipper

No authentic trace of the Hawaii Clipper which disappeared last July 29 with six passengers and a crew of nine on a trans-Pacific flight from Guam to Manila has ever been found, the Air Safety Board reported to the Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday.

Pending some concrete evidence of the Clipper's fate the investigation will remain open.

Oil slick discovered by the United States Army transport Meigs near the last reported position of the Clipper the day after its disappearance was proved to have no connection with the airplane.

The only evidence which offers possibility of future discovery of the ship's fate was the fact that a telephone company employe on the Island of Luhay reported hearing an airplane at the time the Clipper might normally have flown over the area. It was ascertained that no other airplanes were in the vicinity.

Two Washington men disappeared on the Clipper, Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of George Washington University Medical School, and Dr. Fred A. Meier, of the Department of Agriculture.

"I am profoundly shocked to see you express great concern at the synagogues burned in Germany when I have seen no such sentiment expressed toward the thousands of churches burned in Spain which I have seen," her message said.

The duchess, only daughter of Mrs. Fitzgerald Garrett Watson, of Washington and Newport, married Charles-Philippe, 33-year-old Duke of Nemours at Paris on September 24, 1928, in a marriage that was not recognized by the French nobility headed by the exiled Duke de Guise.

Christ Lutherans of Bethesda Open New Building on Dec. 4

Ends 4-Year Struggle for Independence
To Worship 1st Time in Church of Their Own
Pastor Is the Young Rev. Henry J. Whiting

A struggle for independence begun four years ago will culminate in victory on Sunday, December 4, as the Rev. Henry J. Whiting, native Washingtonian, and his Christ Lutheran congregation, of Bethesda, worship for the first time in a church building of their own. Dr. Walter Shuette, president of the Eastern District of the American Lutheran Church, will deliver the main sermon.

Located at Glenbrooke and old Georgetown roads, the building, remodeled from an old Victorian residence, was financed in a campaign last May, in which more than $7,200 was raised in seven days by the congregation.

Participating in the dedication ceremony will be many of the church leaders who encouraged the young Mr. Whiting's initial efforts, including Dr. G. E. Lenski, Grace Lutheran cleric, and the Rev. S. T. Nicholas, former Keller Memorial pastor, whose parishes contributed a lectern, hymnals and other materials for the services, held since the outset at the State Theater through the courtesy of the owner, J. Henry Hiser, who later joined the church.

They, as well as virtually all the 187 persons assembling at the theater in the fall of 1934 in response to the Rev. Mr. Whiting's persistent house-to-house canvassing, will gather for the rites which will include the All-Lutheran Youth program in the evening, when Lutheran young people from the Washington-Virginia-Maryland area will be invited. Miss Betty Shade, president of the Christ Luther League, and Mrs. C. S. Stanton, adult advisor, will be in charge.

Participants will include C. S. Stanton, superintendent of Christian Education; A. Guy Watkins, chairman of the Building Committee; Roland Trond, Harold Hermanson, George H. Whiting, the pastor's father; E. Emerson Snyder, Finance Committee head; Dr. John G. Ball, De Witt Hyde and Dr. William Bashore, Reception chairman and Church Council president; Worship Service Committee, lead by Mrs. Grace Brake; Property Committee, A. Guy Watkins, and Publicity, Guy Campbell.

Emerson Snyder, which is presenting and installing the Moller organ, and the Men's Club, under William Whiting, the pastor's brother, which donated drapes, also will have a part in the program. Additional services for Dedication Week are slated for Tuesday, "Community Night," when the Rev. Carl Hemminghaus, of Baltimore, will speak; a recital Wednesday night by Adolf Torovsky, Epiphany organist, and a service Thursday night, with the Rev. George Grewenow, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, giving the message.

Walter Snapp, a member of the congregation, was responsible for the landscaping work around the building, which cost $16,000, including the purchase price of the house and lot. Above the church, which has a seating capacity of 150, is the parsonage-apartment of the Rev. Mr. Whiting and his family. There also are several large Sunday school rooms and other units.

The pastor was recently named president of the Youth Research Council, of Bethesda, an organization composed of ministers, school principals, Parent-Teacher leaders and others. Its purpose is to coordinate the civic, educational and religious activities of the community.

He is a graduate of Central High School and the University of Maryland, where he was president of the Student Body in 1931. Last June he delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class, the youngest minister ever having done so.

The question of assessing 1,000,000,000 marks ($400,000,000) penalty among Jews for the slaying of Ernst Vom Rath, German embassy secretary in Paris, who was buried as a Nazi martyr yesterday.

56,000 Held in Camps

The development of some regulated procedure for opening doors of concentration camps to Jews in a position to leave Germany.

Pogrom Continuing

56,000 male Jews are under detention.

The finding of new foreign markets to counter-balance what exporters said was a sharp decrease in German sales abroad, particularly in five countries near Germany.

The "Aryanization" of Jewish capital without seriously injuring national interests. Some economists said the transfer would not necessarily mean better employment conditions, because much Jewish capital long had been used in industry, and the move might mean no improvement in the general business situation.

Latest Jewish estimates are that

The newest week-old anti-Semitic campaign is continuing determinedly, but with only scattered incidents by non-governmental agencies or persons.

A prominent Nazi editor declared that "the German policy regarding the Jewish situation is irrevocable."

That policy, he said, is that "every Jew in due time must get out of Germany, unless he is so old that death eliminates him."

An example of the attitude toward Jews was given in a court verdict, reported today by the Berlin newspaper Boersen-Zeitung, acquitting a Jewess charged with procuring an abortion.

The court at Lueneburg ruled that preventing a Jewish birth was not illegal, although abortions are subject to heavy penalties under the criminal laws.

The verdict said the law could be interpreted now as protecting Aryan offspring alone, and "therefore cannot apply to a race which is the enemy of the German people; indeed, the application would directly benefit that race."

Landon Cites Need Of Neighbor Policy At Lima Session

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 18 (AP).—Delegates to the Pan-American Conference in Lima, Peru, must approach the problems to be discussed in a "good old-fashioned neighborly way" if enduring benefits to the Western Hemisphere are to be achieved, Alf M. Landon, one of the delegates from the United States, said today.

"This conference is of great international importance to the Western Hemisphere," the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said. "It should be more than a 'grab bag' session for trade.

"International relations, based upon good will, direct somewhat our channels of trade. We want to be neighborly, but we want to be good neighbors in the intercourse of trade that will be most beneficial to all our peoples.

"New ideas of government are abroad in the world today and temperaments of people must be taken into consideration as well as armaments."

Mr. Baxter was employed as an upholsterer for W. B. Moses for 33 years, and had worked for the last ten years in the House Office Building. He died Thursday at his home, 5404 Ninth street southeast.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Minnie Ida Baxter; three sons, Norman, Howard and Charles, all of Washington; five daughters, Mrs. M. E. Rueges and Mrs. B. W. Simpson, both of this city, and Mrs. J. L. Powers, of Hopewell, Va.; Mrs. C. M. Pumphrey, of Hyattsville, Md., and Mrs. G. H. Bostnick Is Fined In Pay Deduction

Benny Bortnick, local wrestling referee, was fined $100 by Judge Walter J. Casey in Police Court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to four charges of violating the Unemployment Compensation Act.

Bortnick was first arraigned October 17 and pleaded not guilty to 35 alleged violations of the act. The four charges to which he pleaded guilty charged him with illegally deducting 3 per cent of his employes' wages. The money was deducted to cover breakage, Bortnick told Assistant District Attorney Carl Kindelberger.

Mate of Girl, 12, Freed As None Invokes Law

Russellville, Ark., Nov. 18 (AP).—WPA laborer Frank Harris, 33, was released from jail today to return to his 12-year-old bride of seven months, the former Pauline Beavers.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Robert Ragsdale said he dismissed the charge of violating the State's marriage laws because neither the girl, her mother nor any of her relatives opposed the marriage.

Sought Culture in Reich, Found Terror

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Ione Robinson, shown here, young American painter who went to Germany recently to study German culture, returned to New York yesterday with an eyewitness account of the anti-Semitic reign of terror in Germany last week. Before she went to Berlin, she said, she had been in Spain but nothing she saw in the Spanish war "shocked me so much as what I saw in Berlin"

Roosevelt Urges Longer Stay In U. S. for German Refugees

State

ican director of the intergovernmental committee, has for some time been prepared to go to Berlin to attempt to work out with the German government "practical measures for the solution of the problems involved."

"Although the German government was advised some weeks ago by the diplomatic representatives in Berlin of several of the members of the committee that Mr. Rublee was prepared to discuss these questions, no definite reply has yet been received," the Secretary added.

Meanwhile, there were official indications this Government plans no general relaxation of the immigration laws to permit mass entry of refugees into this country. Secretary of Labor Perkins said Thursday that both German and Austrian quotas are filled nearly a year and a half in advance.

The President said he thought there would be no relaxation in the law and Secretary Hull pointed out the Government already has given attention "to the full extent permitted by law." Mrs. Roosevelt at a press conference again opposed change in actual immigration quotas.

When questioned on the quota law, President Roosevelt disclosed his recommendation that the Labor Department grant extensions of stay to refugees here on visitors' permits, but whose passports will be canceled by Germany in December.

The President said these are not Jews only, but members of other religions as well. If they are forced to return to Germany by December 30, the President said a great many believe their treatment might become a serious problem. From humane considerations, he said he thought this country has no right to send them back.

The President told reporters that the facts will be laid before Congress, and if no legislative action is taken, it would be only decent humanity to permit refugees to remain indefinitely on extensions under law. These visiting refugees, he said, could not take out American citizenship papers, as the law requires them to go back to their country of origin and re-enter the country when naturalization papers are sought.

Dieckhoff's instructions to return to Berlin followed by only four days similar instructions from this Government to American Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, in Berlin, and was regarded by observers as Germany's reply to the American move. It is believed to aggravate the possibility of a more serious break in diplomatic relations. Wilson already is en route home. When Dieckhoff sails Friday for Berlin, Dr. Hans Thomsen, counselor of the German Embassy, will remain in charge here.

Green, in his radio appeal for extension of the labor boycott of German goods, pointed out that the A. F. of L. at its convention five years ago put in effect an economic boycott against Germany, and this action has been reaffirmed at each succeeding convention.

"I now address the same appeal to all of my listeners," said Green. "Such action can speak louder than words. Refuse to buy German goods or to use German service until the persecution of Jews in Germany is terminated and they are accorded the rights of human beings."

Urges Economic Pressure

Green said only economic pressure from the outside world can "impress upon Hitler the tragic folly of his course." He pledged Federation support "to any practical plan for the release of refugees from Hitler's wrath" and the support of 5,000,000 A. F. of L. members "to keep the plague of Naziism from spreading in this country." He said, "what is happening in Germany today is so terrible that it makes us ashamed that human beings can sink to such depths."

Speaking from Syracuse, N. Y., over the same Columbia network, Matthew Woll, A. F. of L. vice-president, called for a "moral ring around Germany" and urged Americans to "become part of some movement directed toward the relief or the salvation of the victims of the Nazi savagery."

"Let us remember that the Nazi regime aims not only at the Jews, who are today the victims of savagery," Woll said. "Tomorrow it may embrace the Catholics and the following day the Protestants. Not only their faith but their churches and wealth are in constant jeopardy".

Women Voters Approve

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, wrote to the President:

"The board of the National League of Women Voters, ending a week's session in Washington, requests me to express to you their hearty approval of your statement to the press in which you referred to the shock suffered by public opinion in the United States consequent upon the news from Germany.

"As members of an organization dedicated to the ideals of democracy, we witness withdrawal of protection from minorities in many parts of the world and increasing disregard of fundamental human rights with sorrow and fear that if continued the principles of democracy will be seriously impaired."

Peanut Vendor To Donate Day's Profits to Chest

Steve Vasilakos made plans yesterday to turn over his quota to the Community Chest. His quota is a full day's profit fro mhis peanut and popcorn stand outside the White House grounds, where he has held forth since the days President Taft.

Steve describes himself as a "good falla," but there is a type of American who would call him a "sucker."

It isn't only that he makes donations to the Community Chest, the Red Cross, the Warm Springs Foundation and other worthy caused. But he is forever handing over his profits to persons with hard-luck stories.

Steve is a problem to Soterios Nicholson, prominent Greek lawyer, who looks out for his affairs.

"He gives away so much," said Nicholson, "he has a hard time raising the $10 he has to pay for garage rent on his peanut stand."

Firm Asks to Drop Holding Company

Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation asked permission of the Securities Commission yesterday to eliminate holding company.

The corporation, disclosing its intention to absorb assets of Huntington Gas Co., of Huntington, W. Va., said that as a subsidiary holding company Huntington Gas no longer serves a useful purpose and its continued existence unnecessarily complicates the Columbia system.

The Huntington company formerly leased a gas line from West Virginia gas fields to markets in Kentucky and Ohio.

Results of Drive Against Syphilis Shown in Film

A dramatic exposition of the war against syphilis was unfolded yesterday before the high command of the United States Public Health Service, writers and civic workers in the new Interior building auditorium at a preview, "Three Counties Against Syphilis."

Depicting highlights of the case-finding, case-curing drive being waged among the Negro population of Glynn, Camden and McIntosh Counties, Georgia, the two-reel film is to be released nationally in January.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, spearhead of the nationwide crusade against the disease, was in the audience which saw how doctors, nurses, and social workers are pressing their drive in dance halls, factories, revival meetings, schoolrooms and homes.

To date 80 per cent of the colored population has been tested for syphilis. Twenty-six per cent were found to be infected. Expressed in numbers, 3,135 men, women and children out of 11,902 examined examined were revealed as sufferers.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember (for 3 generations) one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

'Bluebeard's' Lawyer Hired For Grynszpan

Engaged by Americans To Defend Envoy-Killer Aids DeKoven Slayer

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Vincent de Moro-Giafferi, renowned criminal lawyer who once defended "Bluebeard" Henri Landru, announced today he had accepted an American request to defend Herschel Grynszpan, 17-year-old Polish Jew whose slaying of a German embassy secretary loosed Nazi vengeance on German Jews.

Moro-Giafferi said he had acepted the request of the Grynszpan defense committee of America to take charge of the case.

Grynszpan now is in a French prison awaiting trial for killing Ernst vom Rath.

Defending De Koven Slayer

Like "Bluebear," who paid for 11 slayings with his life February 15, 1922, Grynszpan faces the guillotine. "Bluebeard" lured women to death on promises of marriage to obtain their money. Grynsbpan said his motive was love for the Jewish people.

Moro-Giafferi also is defense counsel for Eugene Weidmann, German who confessed to six slayings including that of Jean de Koven, 22-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., dancer, whose body was found buried beneath Weidmann's porch in Saint Cloud, a Paris suburb, last December.

Weidmann probably will be brought to trial early next year.

A Corsican Deputy

Moro-Giafferi is 60 years old, a Paris-born Corsican. He has been defense counsel in many other important cases and attended the international legal committee inquiry into the German Reichstag fire.

He was a member of the Chamber of Deuties for Corsica from 1919 to 1928 and served as undersecretary on technical instruction in the cabinet of Edouard Herriot in 1929.

The date of Grynszpan's trial, which has stimulated great public interest in France, as well as the rest of the world, has not been fixed.

The prosecution may attempt to prove the German government's contention that Grynszpan was an instrument of "international Jewry" and the shooting of Vom Rath November 7 was part of a wide plot rather than the act of an individual.

American Virility Found Unimpaired

Philadelphia, Nov. 18 (AP).—A population expert today reported American virility is unimpaired despite the rush and worry of the present times.

The report was made to the American Philosophical Society, an organization started by Benjamin Franklin to spread useful knowledge.

The virility conclusions were given by John C. Flanagan, of Teachers College, Columbia University. They came from intensive study of professional people, the type whose families are limited.

ing with all earnestness against the barbarous treatment accorded these unfortunate people by the officials of the Nazi government."

Dr. Darby explained that many of the church members for whom they spoke are of German extraction, "but, of course, they regret these actions as much as anyone else.

Day of Prayer Called

"We fervently hope that something may happen to change the attitude of the German leaders or that new men with different ideals shall be brought into control of that government," the letter added.

Dr. Darby expressed the hope that the protest would be brought to the attention of the German Embassy.

"Even though it seems to have no effect," he said, "nonetheless, our consciences demand that we shall not be silent when our fellow men are treated in so inhuman a fashion anywhere in the world."

The call for a day of prayer was sent by the federation to all pastors throughout Washington.

"We unite in inviting all Christian people to join in prayer and intercession for the victims of racial and religious oppression," the federation said, "who, because of loyalty to conscience or the accident of birth are forced to endure persecution or exile."

Citing the plight of the Jews in Germany and parts of Czechoslovakia absorbed by the Reich, the federation said:

"We would emphasize the fact that the persecution of those of Jewish blood is a problem for Christians as well as for Jews."

Christian Duty Stressed

At least half of the Jews who are being driven from their homes by Nazi followers, the statement said, are Christians by profession.

"The Jews of the world have been most generous in affording help to their own people, and in countless instances have given assistance to Christians of Jewish blood," it added.

"But we have no right to expect them to do this; to give aid both to the Christian 'non-Aryans' in Germany and to the thousands who are forced to become refugees is a plain and inescapable duty of all Christians. We appeal to the members of our churches to respond generously to the appeal of the American Committee for Christian German Refugees."

The federation called for a united effort to combat "the hateful anti-Semitism which prevails in many lands and even in our own country.

"We must recognize anti-Semitism at home as well as abroad, as a plain denial of the spirit of our Lord who was Himself a Hebrew according to the flesh and who taught us all men are brothers," it concluded.

Among the signers of the invitation to prayer were Bishop Edwin E. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church; the Rev. P. O. Bersell, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Augustanan Synod of North America; the Rev. Ralph Atkinson, moderator of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. F. D. Kershner, president of the International Convention of Disciples of Christ.

Glaser Denies Selling Secrets In Nazi Spy Trial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 18.—Erich Glaser, former private in the United States Air Service, today in Federal court denied supplying military secrets to Guenther Gustav Rumrich, Army deserter, who plead guilty to espionage.

Glaser's co-defendants are Ootto Herman Voss, German-born airplane mechanic, and Johanna Hofmann, former hair dresser on the North German Lloyd liner Europa.

Glaser denied, too, ever telling Rumrich that joining the spy ring would give him an opportunity of getting even with the United States for its action in joining the allies in the World War. He said he had lived with Rumrich for a time in the Bronx, but never believed his plotting was serious.

Court Saves Girl's Money From Nazis

Injunction Is Granted 'Fugitive Tax' Paid Wants to Stay in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 18.—Federal Judge George A. Welsh granted a temporary injunction today preventing withdrawal of a $7,000 bank account an attorney said "Nazi agents" sought to wrest from an 18-year-old "non-Aryan" German girl.

The lawyer, Alexander Rubin, told the court the money was a trust fund established for Miss Hannelore Koenigsberger, who came to this country about four months ago. She is a daughter of Dr. Max Koenigsberger, a physician in Germany.

The account represents the balance of $30,000 bequeathed to Miss Koenigsberger by a friend, Rubin said. He asserted the rest had been paid the German government as a "fugitive tax."

Rubin told Judge Welsh "Nazi agents" learned of the deposit, "forced Dr. Koenigsberger to sign a release, and made a demand on a bank here for the money through a local attorney. He said the German government had "rescinded" the girl's "release."

"What is going to happen to the girl?" Judge Welsh asked. "Is she going back to Germany?"

"No," Rubin replied, "she intends to stay here. In fact, she has already applied for first citizenship papers."

no Wonder Ruppert's is Right!

ONLY the aristocracy, among hops and grains, is ever chosen for Ruppert's Beer. And Ruppert treats those pedigreed ingredients with the deep respect they deserve.

A vast and thoroughly modern brewery turns the gold of the fields into the liquid gold that is Ruppert's. So perfect is the equipment of this brewery, that the beer it produces contains every last particle of the flavor of the grains, the fragrance of the hops.

But the proof lies in the product. Try a creamy-collared glass of mellow, cooling Ruppert's. Notice that it tastes right, while you're sipping it . . . it "sits" right, when you've finished. Brewed right, aged right, served right—no wonder the South is saying—"Ruppert's is right"!

Dieckhoff's Opportunity

The recall of Ambassador Dieckhoff to Berlin is not surprising. To save face, if for no other reason, the German government would have had to counter the summoning of Ambassador Wilson to Washington by a similar action. When friendly relations between nations deteriorate the downward course is marked by reciprocal, not merely one-sided, diplomatic recognition of the ugly fact.

The German official news agency announces that Dr. Dieckhoff "will inform the foreign minister in detail concerning the queer attitude toward events in Germany of a domestic nature," which is now apparent in the United States. It is to be hoped that this will prove an accurate forecast. If Dr. Dieckhoff is permitted to report "in detail" to the Nazi high command, some very valuable, if unpalatable, information will be imparted. And in that case current trends in American public opinion will cease to seem "queer" to the German authorities.

That which is really "queer"—to the point of being downright dangerous—is the fact that German officials are apparently surprised by the hostile American reaction to the racial and religious persecutions instigated as a matter of Nazi policy. As well as anything this illustrates the depth of the gulf today separating the German and the American viewpoints. The latter was well summarized by President Roosevelt's statement that he "could scarcely believe that such things could occur in a twentieth century civilization." The Nazi attitude is that persecutions of this sort themselves constitute twentieth century civilization.

This was again emphasized by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, to whom Dr. Dieckhoff will report, in his oration at the bier of Ernst vom Rath. "A hostile world, petrified in antiquated forms," said the Foreign Minister on Thursday, "believes itself able to stay the course of destiny through repudiation of everything that is young and strong."

Dr. Dieckhoff will do his country, and the cause of peace, a very real service if he advises his chief not to rely complacently on any assumption that the United States is "petrified in antiquated forms." The German Ambassador himself knows better, for he is an excellent diplomat and a shrewd observer. He will never have a better opportunity to use his talents constructively than on this visit to Berlin. There he will have a chance to impress his government with the depth, the intensity and all the grim implications of current American opinion regarding Germany.

Such constructive opportunities, as the tide is running, may not exist indefinitely.

No Colonial Question

Following the Munich settlement there was a strong possibility that the next stage in the policy of appeasement would be the restoration to Germany of some, if not all, of her pre-war colonies.

That possibility is now far less probable. The revulsion of public sentiment in Great Britain and France against the recent persecutions of the Nazi regime has been intense. No government in London or Paris would now affront the electorate by placing primitive peoples under Nazi civilization. And both Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier have been quick to recognize this situation.

In a telegram to the governor of Tanganyika Territory, a region once under German rule, the British government has declared that it "is not contemplating the transfer of any territories under British administration." The announcement was greeted with cheers when read in the House of Commons.

In France, Premier Daladier announced that his government will "resolutely maintain the integrity of its possessions as they had been constituted at the end of the World War."

At the same time an equally strong stand against the cession to Germany of Southwest Africa, former German colony now under mandate to the Union of South Africa, has been taken by Gen. Jan Smuts, Commander of South Africa's World War forces.

At Munich, Germany won a bloodless victory of tremendous magnitude. The path to further advance was open to her, with Chamberlain and Daladier prepared to give a helping hand even with respect to a redistribution of colonial territories. In a manner that has outraged the entire world the Nazi regime has now thrown away its opportunity.

Even through an iron censorship the German people will recognize this proof of the stupidity, to say nothing of the brutality, of their present rulers.

Toward Trade Stability

Announcement of the terms of the trade agreements with the United Kingdom and Canada will undoubtedly bring forth a mingled chorus of praise and protest from the agricultural and industrial interests affected. That, of course, is an unavoidable consequence of any bona fide effort to lower international trade barriers. The immediate effects of the pacts are likely to be exaggerated both by hostile critics and enthusiastic advocates after reading about the huge volume of trade to be covered by the agreement.

Such totals are not a dependable indicator of the importance of the changes to be made. The significance of the pacts can be determined only after a period of trial with the aid of expert market analysts who have studied individual tariff schedules. It can, however, be safely stated that the agreements provide some quite substantial concessions of immediate importance and others that are potentially valuable.

For example, the removal of the British import duty on American wheat means little at present when subsidized exports of wheat from other countries are being sold in British markets. But if the world ever returns to so-called normal methods of marketing wheat, the elimination of the duty will be a real concession. Moreover, Canada has made a gesture of good will in consenting to removal of the preference accorded her wheat by Great Britain. In return she has obtained additional concessions from the United States on certain exports to this country. Here is the modest beginning of a kind of multilateral reduction of tariff barriers that may become a precedent for later more ambitious efforts.

In the agreements with the United Kingdom the United States has benefited chiefly from concessions applicable to agricultural products. Removal of the duty on lard will seem more important, of course, when the level of domestic supplies rises toward normal. The reduction or removal of tariffs on fruits and fruit juices will also increase our outlets for a growing trade in such products.

In return for these favors, Great Britain benefits mainly from reductions of duties on certain manufactured goods, notably cotton textiles of the higher grades. Our own manufacturers have also been aided by limited reductions in duties on a varied list of articles. But our negotiators failed to secure any reduction of the high duties imposed on American automobiles. All they obtained was an assurance that rates would not be increased for the duration of the agreement.

From the economic viewpoint both the British and Canadian accords, indeed, are chiefly remarkable for what they promise not to do rather than for what they agree to do. The pacts are designed above all else to maintain the status quo by an exchange of promises not to put free articles on the dutiable lists, not to raise existing tariffs and not to alter quotas except under certain stated conditions. While these are rather negative achievements, they greatly restrict the field within which new barriers to trade among the signatory nations could be erected for a period of years. There is a very valuable guarantee against unexpected changes—worth securing even if the actual level of duties remains high.

For instance, three-fifths of the value of our imports from Canada is accounted for by raw materials and semifinished commodities entering duty free. Both the old and the new agreement with Canada binds us to leave most of these articles on the free list. Great Britain also gives a pledge that no tariff will be levied upon our raw cotton—a provision precluding preferential treatment of empire cotton.

In case of those British colonies covered by the accord, concessions mainly take the form of agreements not to impose duties, not to raise them and not to change preferential rates to our disadvantage. Provisions are also incorporated to regularize methods of valuing imported articles—a most important matter. There are likewise escape clauses making possible the termination of agreements in case of wide variations in exchange relationships.

It will be a long time before the effect of the pacts upon the actual volume of our trade with Canada and Great Britain can be appraised. The acceptance of the principle of most-favored-nation treatment by the parties to the agreement is also a complicating factor. But more significant than the economic result is the incontestable evidence that Great Britain has decided to try the American way of lowering tariff barriers. She has been pursuing a course that was committing her to an increasing number of bilateral agreements of the German type coupled with pursuit of a modified form of autarchy achieved through a system of imperial tariff preferences.

Memorial Flimflam

Webster defines "flimflam" as "a deception; a trick; now, especially, a trick by which one is swindled." In using that term to discredit all opposition to location of the Jefferson Memorial in the Tidal Basin area President Roosevelt came very close to demonstrating the stratagem which he so vigorously denounced.

No doubt there has been considerable overstatement of the case against the proposed memorial project in some quarters. Any groups guilty of such misrepresentation deserve the rebuke the President gave them. Mr. Roosevelt's mistake was in supposing that all the widespread public outcry on this issue has been inspired by misinformation and petty sentiment. Quite apart from emotional appeals on behalf of the cherry blossoms, there is a determined civic protest against despoilation of the Tidal Basin area by the erection of an unsuitable mausoleum there.

To reply in humorous terms to only the emotional fringe of a large protesting group is one of the most ancient forms of flimflam. But the record of devious maneuvering in connection with this project does not begin either with its critics or with the President. It goes back to the successful effort to obtain funds for this project without a full disclosure of the destruction it would entail.

In the brief debate in the House over the initial appropriation the late Chairman Boylan of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission gave the distinct impression that objections to the destruction of trees and modification of the basin had been completely met. Representative O'Connor assured the House that "the tearful question of the sacred cherry blossoms was settled." With these assurances and without any detailed information as to the latest memorial plans, Congress voted funds to be used at the discretion of the commission.

That is how the flimflam began. No doubt the erroneous impressions on which the Congressional vote was based has been a significant factor in the unrestrained criticism recently directed against the memorial. President Roosevelt might have called a halt to the whole sorry business by suggesting to the commission that it wait for more definite instructions. But instead he merely created a new biased picture of the controversy. For example, he did not mention the contemplated destruction of 126 elm trees, which is in many ways more regrettable than the loss of cherry trees that can be readily replaced.

Moreover, the President is reported to have said that Congress decided the memorial should be built on the Tidal Basin site and that nothing can now be done to change the plan. At no time has Congress specifically approved this site or the design of the memorial. By its vote of last June 8 it again left the entire matter to the discretion of the commission. It appropriated $500,000 "to remain available until expended," specifying also that this sum could be used to commence construction work.

Obviously, this was negative action. It left the commission with full authority to go ahead or to delay the work if there is any reason to do so. Full disclosure of the commission's plan has convinced thousands of earnest and thoughtful citizens that the memorial would be a costly and esthetically tragic blunder. The President's casual and evasive reply to these fears has made a re-examination of the project by the forthcoming Congress the more imperative.

Just A Reminder

Not every reformer is a philanthropist, nor every philanthropist a reformer. But by definition all reformers and philanthropists are optimists. They are convinced that the human race is worth saving and refuse to admit that the point is open to debate. So, in their several ways, they continue to do something about it, attempting to remove what they think bad, seeking to promote what they think good, and accomplishing something, even though it is frequently somewhat different from the thing desired.

There is, God knows, enough to view with a disconsolate eye. But let us not overplay the doleful chord. Let us turn for relief and with enthusiastic appreciation to aspects of the twentieth century world such as the Red Cross, which has tided communities over so many tough spots, to the Institute on Conservation of Vision, which has been meeting here this week under the sponsorship of the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness, and to the Community Chest, which permits every one of us to do his duty as his brother's keeper.

If the work of these organizations is not worth while, then life isn't worth the living and we are here to no purpose whatever. In that case we have no logical reason to be depressed about what is happening in Germany or China or anywhere else. But if such effort is really worth while (and who really doubts that it is?) then part of the work belongs to each of us. So, Lord love you, cheer up and play the cheerful giver!

De Jure Emperor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An event of great importance was relegated to page five in your issue of November 17. I refer to the signing in Rome of the Anglo-Italian agreement, whereby Great Britain recognizes that the title of Emperor of Ethiopia is de jure the right of the King of Italy.

This agreement emphasizes once more the realistic trend in British diplomacy since Messrs. Eden and Duff-Cooper were found wanting in the quality that will make Premier Chamberlain's name go down in history as the greatest pacificator of the present. Had it not been for his willingness to compromise when others loudly proclaimed their blind chauvinism, today Europe might have been a war-torn shambles.

We are apt to forget that most of the European states are closer than some of the United States, and the policy of peace at any price may often be found of greater mutual value than assuming to maintain by force political doctrines having much moral but little practical application.

It has been said that Anglo-Saxon idealism fails to comprehend Latin pragmatism; now, it would appear that Mr. Chamberlain not only understands, but is able to reconcile those differences. Moreover, I venture to say that his psychological make-up is not all Greek, for a strain of the Machiavellian astuteness is discernible.

Back in 1876 Disraeli placed an imperial diadem on Victoria's brow, and fickle Clio, who delights to confound historians, must again record that the newest imperator's crown is a symbol of oppressed humanity. FIDES.

The Point Is Well Taken

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I beg to take exception to the manner in which the convention of the C. I. O., now in progress, is reported by an Associated Press dispatch in your paper today. I think it is unfair, improper and manifestly biased to rip a phrase out of its context, set it into another sentence, implying something quite different from its original intent, and then on top of it, put this into the headline of the article.

I am referring to the expression: "no compromise." Reading the first paragraph your report says: . . . "with the declaration that it would accept no compromise with the A. F. L." Reading on further down in the article, I find the respective part of the report in full context as follows: "The C. I. O. states with finality there can be no compromise with its fundamental purpose and aim of organizing workers into powerful industrial unions, nor with its obligation to fully protect the rights and interests of all its members and affiliated organizations."

Now, this, you will recognize, is something quite different from the first form of quotation, unless you are not really impartial toward the C. I. O. The correct text implies a determined stand by its set fundamental principles and aims, an honorable stand under any condition, and there is no indication whatsoever in it of a reprehensible, stubborn and "uncompromising" attitude toward unity with the A. F. of L., as you further emphasize this incorrect conclusion in an editorial about "slamming the door." A correction on this point would seem to be in order. O. J. V.

The Memorial And The Cherry Trees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this hullabaloo about the destruction of a few Japanese non-fruit-bearing cherry trees, the blossoms of which remain on the trees four or five days in the year, and that sometimes in the meanest of weather? Are we in any way under eternal obligations to this demon of the East—this monster, because it has the planes, boats, and all the munitions of war, and can raid a defenseless country and kill its innocent men, women and children, including Americans and other nationals?

You put forth a righteous yell about the murder and persecution of Jews in Germany, when the crime by another nefarious dictator is 100 times worse. Persecution is wrong, whether in Germany, China, or Ethiopia. I do not condone it. Instead of giving passive sanction to either I believe it better and more patriotic instead to give more honor and consideration to a genuine, dyed-in-the-wool, bottled-in-bond home production.

Why shouldn't Jefferson be honored? A home product for home consumption! A man, who during the infancy of our Republic, helped guide its wavering footsteps! A man who fathered education in the early days of our country! A man whose writings and inventive genious contributed much toward the building up of our Nation! Are we Japanese or are we Americans? Are we sissydoodlers or are we red-blooded patriots? It seems that there are still a few nincompoops in Washington who will be led astray on a momentary tangent by some by-product of "alienism" and sacrifice all that is good and pure for a bagatelle.

By all means give us a memorial. Build it in the best place to be had. Cut down all the cherry trees necessary for its construction. When this is done beautify it with dogwood, elm, and other good old American trees and flowers.

FRED M. HUDDLESTUN.
Kenilworth, D. C., Nov. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Construction has not yet begun on the Jefferson Memorial. There's time to block the whole idea and restore the appropriation to the Treasury. The Treasury, incidentally, could use it, for the New Deal is one year older than when the agitation was first begun.

At that time the whole affair was made an issue. Editorial writers turned loose their artillery. Civic groups raised their voices. Congressional leaders conceded the weight of local objections. Apparently the project was thrown out, in view of a public clamor 95 per cent adverse.

The November 7 "mandate" carries an implication a political entity could hardly be dense enough to miss. The American people have had their fill of blind spending, of wild recklessness based on crackpot "plans." They said so at the polls, against just such spending of unnamed millions for a memorial in a location citizens have been a unit in condemning.

Let the clamping down the taxpayers demand start now. The appropriation was sneaked through, given the rush. Pending selection of another site which does not take a large section of park from park purposes, or the balancing of the budget, let the thing be dropped.

Cherry trees aside, write your folks in other localities which have felt the depression; hold forth about this senseless waste in a pampered locality; tell 'em to give their representatives hell, based on the facts disclosed W. BAHNSEN.

Baltimore Highway

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Obviously, from the letter signed by Howard D. Woodson, I have failed to make clear the position of this association regarding other proposed roads to solve the Washington-Baltimore traffic problem.

We are not against other roads but for the boulevard and the business investment it represents. State Planning Commission has an admirably worked out plan for a parkway. There is no reason for abandoning that for other sudden schemes. But there are many reasons for immediate improvement of the boulevard. Not the least of those reasons is that today, now, is the time when people are being killed on the boulevard needlessly; while three years is the most optimistic estimate of the time required to materialize a new highway. Some estimates are ten years.

A very conservative estimate of construction cost of a dual highway is $60,000 a mile. We are of the opinion that for the equivalent of two miles of dual highway simple improvements on the boulevard could be made right now which would decrease accidents fully one-half, facilitate free movement of traffic between Baltimore and Washington, greatly increase the boulevard's attractiveness.

Frequent proposals of new and ill-considered plans can only divert attention from the crying need (1) for immediate improvement of the boulevard; (2) eventual carrying out of the recommendations of State Planning Commission.

HAROLD H. BUCKLES.
Elkridge, Md., Nov. 15.

Profit Sharing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most hopeful and encouraging signs of today is the renewed and increased emphasis which Senator Vandenberg of Michigan is placing upon the need of a profit-sharing system in business and industry, a system which encourages and promotes a spirit of co-operation between employer and employe, and is mutually helpful.

Co-operation leads to a more liberal distribution of wealth. It means more money, more buying power for the masses, and increased business for the employer. Is it not a fact that the only natural and normal way to keep business on the upward march, the wheels of industry turning and everybody employed is to distribute the purchasing power among the masses of the people?

Let us hope that Senator Vandenberg and those associated with him, may be able to help every employer to see that some kind of a profit-sharing plan, through which wealth is more equally distributed, is to his advantage as well as to the advantage of the employe. Business can really prosper only when the people are prosperous. The people will consume all that the farmer raises and will use all the manufacturer makes if the people have the purchasing power. G. E. PLOTT.

Greencastle, Pa., Nov. 17.

Comment And Knowledge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your remarkable editorial entitled "French Justice." Permit me to add that although Dorothy Thompson is without a doubt a brilliant newspaper writer, she neither knows nor understands anything about European affairs.

The Europeans may know as little about us as we know about them but at least, when that is the case, they wisely refrain from commenting, whereas almost every commentator in our country considers it his duty to comment loudly, freely and abundantly.

Mark Sullivan seems to be the only one who has a deep knowledge of every subject he discusses. Thank you for giving us the great pleasure of being able to read his thoughts. R. I. T.

The Post Impressionist

Java & Mocha

MAJOR AUGUSTUS PARMENIDES NUTT and I are great friends and I respect and admire him immensely; nevertheless I am well aware that the more frivolous members of our club regard his stories as somewhat prolix and are inclined to think him a bore. Indeed, I believe that, behind his back, they invariably refer to him as "Major, the Voluble Nutt." Does wisdom speak through the frivolous as out of the mouths of babes and sucklings?

The Voluble Nutt, as they call him, was in fine fettle last night. Some one had commented upon the lack of manners displayed in the street cars, and that gave him his starting point.

"Yest, sir," he said; though to which one of us his remarks were addressed was not otherwise made plain, and we were seven; "Yes, sir, the decay in manners, I fear, is the outward mark of a decay in morals; and always morals are lowered by the crowding of the people into towns and the overgrowth of towns into cities."

He paused for a moment to wipe his glasses and the irrepressible Tompkins spoke up: "Major, I grant that your platitudes are venerable and, therefore, respectable; but what do you make of the words 'Civic virtue' and 'Civility'?"

"Nonsense, sir; I take them to be mere nonsense. Civic virtue is a term much in use by politicians, who haven't it; and civility as a practice, died long ago. These are things much honored in the breach, and you are talking about the non-existent.

"Mr. Tompkins, sir, I'd have you know that the civic virtues, if any, grow away from the cities and civility is a quality found most frequently in the country. And, by the same token, content and happiness are most often found where the people work for them; not where they are supposed to be furnished gratis.

"For example: Where will you find the fireside comfort and content that radiated from the old-fashioned open fireplace. When I was a boy it was my job to keep the wood-box filled. That was work and I sometimes revolted; but it was work that was helpful and healthful; it taught me to assume my share of the burdens of the family and it toughened my muscles. At night when the family gathered around that fire we listened not only to the crackling of the logs but to the homely jokes and witticisms that went the rounds. What chance has a modern city kid to learn anything. Father turns the steam heat on or off and all you have is overheated air, a lack of ventilation, and poor witticisms. There isn't any crackling of wood, only the hammer of the steam pipes; there isn't any singing of sap in the logs, only the drone of the torch-singer over the radio; and in place of family gossip we listen to the advertisements of the broadcast-sponsors.

"Why, sir, we talk of improvements; look at the modern kitchen, or kitchenette, if you please! Is that an improvement on the old-fashioned kitchen? What is it but a constricted laboratory from which finally emerges the soup, vegetables, meats and sweetmeats put up in cans by Thingamabob and advertised ad nauseam on the radio. It is a place wherein is exercised the magic of the can-opener and the holy rites of deodorized cottonseed oil. Can virtue or vitamines come out of such a 2x4 sanctum as that?

"We moderns raise so much coffee that our surplus crops are dumped in the sea or burned. But a cup of decently served, aromatic coffee is hard to get.

"Coffee! Ah! Gentlemen! None of you younger men know what coffee can be, or what it was! You buy a can, or a package, of so-called ground coffee beans; it is brewed on an electric gadget; and you swallow it, grab your hat, and rush for air. That isn't coffee; but, alas! that is all you can get to-day. In the old days father ordered the coffee beans green, in jute bags, from the grocer. And they came straight from Java and direct from Mocha. Of the Mocha, 'pea-berry' was the best. Once a week Aunt Millie roasted a batch and, as the volatile coffee-oil was developed, the aroma filled the house and tantalized the neighbors. Millie's day for roasting was Thursday; other cooks had other days; but, whatever day it was, when anyone on the block roasted coffee we boys out on the street playing could smell it and it made us hungry. Are there any such delicious odors now. Not one! And the roasted coffee, lightly covered by unsalted butter stirred in it, to hold the volatile oil, was laid aside in great crocks for use day by day until the next roasting.

"Then, morning by morning the sound of the grinding of coffee was the signal to get up, and, the aroma rising from brewing coffee pervading the house was the inducement to hurry down to breakfast. And, such a breakfast! In those days they didn't expect you to meet the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune on a half grapefruit, a dish of breakfast food, and a cup of brown slop called coffee. They gave an honest-to-goodness breakfast; eggs and meat and fish, hot rolls and battercakes; and coffee, real, fragrant coffee with all the odors of the flowers of Java and the spicy incense of Arabia."

He paused, as though for reply. But there was none. Then he started toward the door; when he reached it he turned and said: "It used to be said that good Americans, when they die, go to Paris. When I die I shall hunt up the Shade of Aunt Millie! I shall not ask her to dip the tip of her finger in water, to cool my tongue; I shall beg her for one more cup of real coffee."

Inward Revulsion

WRITING ABOUT religious and racial hatred 30 years ago, Mark Twain claimed to be innocent of all such prejudice and said:

PEGLER

"All that I care to know is that a man is a human being—that is enough for me; he can't be any worse."

This is a rather despondent opinion of the breed, but a tempting criticism at a time when nature and the earth still are performing handsomely, but woe abounds, nevertheless, because, in the words of another American journalist, only man is vile. There is nothing wrong with the world that couldn't be cured by the exercise of those superior traits to which man alone lays claim but which are more conspicuously flouted by man than by any of the beasts. Yet there are still occasional flickers of the pulse of decency and conscience which gave reason to go on hoping that the human race may one day conquer the poison in its veins.

AMID THE MORAL and nervous shocks of the Nazi atrocities of last week a subtle but hopeful development has almost escaped notice. For the first time since Hitler came to power there is a feeling of pity for the German people and for Germany. This is not cant but comes of an honest belief that the Germans themselves have suffered more than they yet know in degradation and loss of self-respect.

The Germans are not Orientals. The violent acts and conspiracies which the evil imagination of their captains could conjure against the objects of the terror have been far exceeded by the conduct of the Nazi state, and the feeling of intelligent Germans will be akin to that of an intelligent man who in a self-induced fury seizes a stick and beats his dog until he lies bleeding, smashed and moaning at his feet.

NO MAN NOT insane, no man of the character and pride of the Germans, can do that and escape a dreadful inner conviction that he has debased himself. And the German people, so proud of their race and their country and eager for the respect of the world, will have that reaction when they look at the blood on their hands.

Nobody in Germany as yet may dare express this revulsion but it has been expressed by the New Yorker Stats-Zeitung and Herold, which said, "in the names of our dear ones, we protest against desecration of the German name through fanatics in the ranks of the party in power who are trying to drag a great people into the mire of their sadistic lowness." A pulse-beat.

A REALIZATION is coming at last among the Americans who inherit and take pride in the German character that the Nazi regime is debasing that character at home and disgracing the German country before the world. This is no trivial matter, for the Nazis have always courted the moral support of these Americans, and they will not be able to disregard condemnation from this source.

The German people at home may share the hatred of this country as a nation which has been fired up by the Nazi propaganda, but they will still be sensitive to the opinion of their relatives here, which will filter through to them regardless of the censorship. And it is hard to see how the Steuben societies can avoid taking a similar stand, for obviously the German name is suffering more from the conduct of Josef Goebbels than from any propaganda from the foes or victims of the Reich.

DEFENDERS OF the German name, character and culture cannot indorse, even by silence, a wanton campaign of murder, assault, burning and looting, followed by extortion and enslavement, as representatives of the German people. These Americans suffered much from patrioteering during the great war and after, and the Steuben societies fought against odds and unpopularity for the proposition that the many should not have to suffer for the misdoing of the few.

They now face the fact that the German government has taken horrible revenge on many in retaliation for the act of one tortured boy and that the German character is identified with this pogrom before the world.

The atrocities in Germany were so mechanical, so well organized that there is no believing the claim of spontaneity. The Germans are not spontaneous or riotous, and there is ground for hoping, therefore, that the decent people will be shamed by the horror and by expressions of disgust from their kinsmen here.

100 C. of C. Aides Hear Welfare Head

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 18 (AP).—"The social security act is here to stay, there may be some changes and some additions to the present statute but we will have it with us for a long time," Dr. Walter H. Stauffer, director of public welfare in Virginia, told more than 100 Chamber of Commerce secretaries of Virginia and North Carolina at the opening session of the annual convention at Virginia Beach today.

Divus Augustus

The implication, the presupposition, of administrative absolutism is that of every form of autocracy. Indeed, administrative bureaus and officials rather than courts have been the agents of government by autocrats wherever there has been personal as contrasted with constitutional government. The Roman emperor was set up as a god. Who could presume to match his wisdom against that of a god? The autocratic king of the seventeenth and eighteenth century centralized monarchies ruled by divine right. What were individual rights against right derived from God?

The administrative bureau rules by right of postulated omnicompetence. It presupposes a lack of competence on the part of the rest of the community to manage their own affairs, or else that there is no such thing as their own affairs. What is individual experience or intelligence or resource to match against the omnicompetence of an administrative bureau (and the delegated omnicompetence of one of its clerks or inspectors or investigators) chartered to do what it likes in each case looked upon as unique?

To complete the regime there is needed only a Duce or Fuehrer or superman administrator to direct all of the subsupermen in a common path. The corollary of the proposition that men are not competent to manage the details of their private affairs is that they are not competent to manage public affairs. In the end administrative absolutism must stand upon a political absolutism.

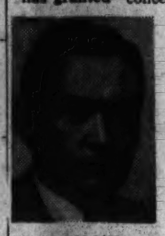
A Fine Achievement

IN DESCRIBING the new trade agreements it is no doubt convenient to say that the United States has granted "concessions" on certain articles made in the United Kingdom and that in return it will receive "benefits" on certain articles made in America. But the words "concessions and "benefits" are misleading.



LIPPMANN.

Let us take as an example a single item in these voluminous agreements. The British duty on a standard typewriter manufactured in the United States is reduced from $22.50 to $17.50. This is listed in the summaries as a British "concession" to the United States. But what does it actually mean? It means that British business men and British government departments will be able to buy typewriters for at least $5 less than they are now paying. Can it be said with accuracy that an arrangement which enables an Englishman to buy his typewriter more cheaply is a "concession?" Does he not save money on the cost of running his business? And does not this saving enable him to sell his product more cheaply, and, therefore, to sell more of it, or to make bigger profits and, therefore, to have more income for investment in British industry?

SURELY, it is clear that these so-called "concessions" are in fact benefits to the consumer, and that an agreement which enables American manufacturers to sell more to Englishmen who can now buy more typewriters at a lower price is a reciprocal benefit. But what about the British manufacturer of typewriters? He will complain, of course, that the agreement will either reduce his sales, or compel him to reduce his prices and thus reduce the profits. It must be admitted that he may suffer at first, but it is, nevertheless, by no means certain that in the long run even he will suffer. For if typewriters become cheaper in the United Kingdom, there will be more typewriters bought.

We can see clearly how this works in the case of American automobiles. They are so much cheaper to buy and so much cheaper to operate than foreign automobiles that American families can buy cars when European families of the same income still regard a car as an unattainable luxury. So it is for typewriters. We use more typewriters in America because typewriters are cheaper in America, and if British typewriters become cheaper, people who never had a typewriter will begin to think of buying one. A reduction in price opens up a new market, and there is no reason why the British manufacturer should not make up for his immediate losses by getting a share of the new and larger market.

EVEN IF IT WERE true, however, that the British manufacturer lost some of his sales, it is he, rather than the British people as a whole, who has made a "concession." And if he has made a "concession," the "beneficiary" is not merely the American manufacturer of typewriters but all the British manufacturers who have to buy typewriters in order to conduct their business.

But it is not only the British buyers of typewriters who gain. Suppose that as a result of this arrangement an Englishman doing business in London buys an American typewriter for say $115. How does he pay the American manufacturer in American dollars? He does not have any American dollars. He has only British pounds sterling. Obviously he, or his banker, has to sell about 23 British pounds to some American who has 115 American dollars. Now what does the American who now has 23 British pounds do with the money? He cannot spend it in the United States. He has to spend it eventually, does he not, inside the United Kingdom or at least within that part of the British Empire where pounds sterling are currency. So some British producer eventually sells 23 pounds worth of British goods to an American. Thus total British trade is at least as great as it was; some American has bought from some Briton the equivalent of what the Briton has bought from the American typewriter manufacturer.

OBVIOUSLY, in real life the transactions are much more complicated than this. But no matter how complicated they are, the essential principle is always the same. For every sale of goods there is another sale of goods, and there can be no such thing as one-way trade. The only one-way movement of goods that is possible is through charity or through robbery. If we gave typewriters to Englishmen without getting paid in English goods, that would be charity. And when nations seize a city and loot it, there is no trade. But except when the goods constitute a free gift or are stolen, the sale of goods is an exchange of goods.

U. S. Courts A Safeguard

Nazi Justice

A NEWSPAPER HEADLINE over a late detail of German persecution of Jews reads: "Nazis Hold Wealthy Jews; Thousands to Lose Homes to Aryans."

I choose to take this as a text for pointing out that this can not happen in America, and why it can not. To use Nazi brutality to the Jews as a lesson might be heartless if we were merely congratulating ourselves that we are not as other nations are. But I do not do it as an expression of national self-righteousness. I do it as a means of pointing out what America must hold to if America is to remain an island of justice in a world in which the area under the reign of brutality spreads.

SULLIVAN

If our government were to seize and hold any individual, what would happen? The individual's relatives or friends would go to a court, any court. They would ask the court for what is called a writ of habeas corpus.

"Habeas corpus" is a Latin legal phrase. It means "produce the person." Just because so many of our safeguards of justice and liberty are expressed in such Latin terms as "habeas corpus" and "Magna Charta," or in such phrases as "Bill of Rights;" and just because we have had these safeguards so long, a generation has grown up that does not understand them, but just takes them for granted and fails to realize that they could be taken from us. Our generation must learn the meaning of Magna Charta in the way it was known to the generation of English who were alive when Magna Charta, "the great charter," was won from an English king. We must understand the Bill of Rights as it was understood by the early American generation who would not ratify our Constitution until they received a promise that the Bill of Rights would be included in it as an amendment.

IN AMERICA, if an agent of Government seized a citizen, a court would issue a writ of habeas corpus. The court would give the writ to the sheriff. The sheriff would take the writ to whatever Government agent was holding the citizen. The sheriff would read the writ. Thereupon the Government agent would give up the citizen. The sheriff would take the citizen before the court. The court would examine into the circumstances. If the court concluded the Government agent had a legal right to hold the citizen, the court would direct the sheriff to take the citizen back. If the court decided the citizen was being improperly held, the court would set him free.

IN AMERICA THIS has happened thousands of times. More important is the number of times it has not happened, for Government agents know the rule of habeas corpus so well that they do not seize or hold a citizen unless they are confident the courts will uphold them. I think there was never a case in which an agent of Government failed to "produce the person" on demand of a court.

I AM WRITING where I do not have access to books of reference, but my impression is that even during the Civil War, when President Lincoln's army generals seized and held citizens on accusations of treason, there were some cases in which the courts issued habeas corpus writs, and the generals obeyed them. So strongly is habeas corpus embodied in the law, so great is the respect for courts, that one man, an unarmed sheriff, acting as the agent of a court, was obeyed by a general commanding an army. The courts "have neither sword nor purse." Their only arms are the respect they have, for their authority and their independence. That this independence of the courts should be preserved is the lesson that events elsewhere cry out to America.

It is the same as to seizure of the homes of Jews by the German government. In America a citizen whose property is seized can go to a court. The court will issue an injunction, or whatever other form of writ is appropriate. The court will inquire into the circumstances, and into the law bearing on the circumstances. If the seizure is legal and proper, the court will permit it to go on; otherwise not.

IF THE READER understands how the courts are America's safeguard against what is happening in other countries, he will appreciate the deep concern to which some of us were stirred when, recently, a conspicuous attempt was made to reduce the independence of the courts and their authority. The attempt goes on in many fields. In much legislation there is attempt to narrow the right of courts to review actions taken by agents of the Government.

The American ideal is that government should never have power to lay hands on a citizen's person or property without right of the citizen to appeal to the courts, and, if necessary and practicable, to trial by a jury. This ideal, as respects property, may not always be easily practicable. But in some recent legislation it has been invaded too far. America must restore and preserve it. To fail to do so is to open the way to "authoritarian government." And the last stage of authoritarian government is what we see in Germany today, and what we saw recently in Russia, in the taking of farmers from their farms and executing them or exiling them to Siberia.

Held For Ransom

By Barnet Nover

The German Refugee Problem

THE BRITISH government has sent a query to a number of colonial governors, including the Governor of Tanganyika, asking them whether and to what extent the areas under their rule can be made available as havens for the persecuted Jews of Germany. The understanding is that, when the replies are all in, the British government may set aside a large tract of land for refugee colonization.

Possibly other colonial powers will do likewise. Possibly, although the chances are distinctly against it, various nations will open their doors to a greater influx of refugees than they have shown any disposition to receive up to now. But whether all these efforts at mass migration will do more than scrape the surface of the problem spotlighted by the latest wave of pogroms in the Third Reich is very doubtful.

THERE HAVE BEEN mass migrations in the past. There was, for instance, the movement of Irish after the great famine of the 'forties of the last century. There was the exodus of the 'forty-eighters from Germany, when the blood and iron regime was saddled on Prussia. There was the wave of immigration to the United States from Russia and southeastern Europe at the end of the last century and the beginning of this one.

But between these movements of populations and the one which is at present in contemplation there are vast differences. The immigrants who came to this country were, often poor, but they were not penniless, and they found here a vast undeveloped Nation eager to receive them. This situation no longer obtains. On the other hand their countries of origin placed few if any obstacles in the way of their leaving. They were permitted to take their property with them.

THE ACTION of the Nazi government today is deliberately designed to strip those who would find refuge abroad of every bit of their possessions. They are to be made penniless even before they start and the burden of getting them out as of settling them in their new homes is placed on the rest of the world.

Indeed, it is not clear that the Nazi leaders are anxious to get rid of all the Jews of Germany, even if places of refuge could be found for them. Not only are the Jews needed as necessary scapegoats to divert the attention of the populace from government-created evils, but their continued presence and their impoverishment brings into the Third Reich a flow of foreign exchange which that nation desperately needs. In other words, the world's sympathy for the persecuted can be used by the persecutors to their own advantage.

EVEN IF THAT were not the case, could mass migration solve the problem the world now faces? It is difficult to believe that. Should Germany succeed in dumping its unwanted minorities on the rest of the world, there are other nations that might imitate the Nazi technique. And in central and eastern Europe there are some 6,500,000 Jews. Emigration can, at best, solve the problem to only a limited extent.

The situation would be different, of course, if the Nazi government could be persuaded to give a helping hand to those seeking flight from the land of the swastika, to permit them to leave with enough property to make them self-sustaining in the countries where they may find a haven. That was the hope expressed by the Evian conference. That hope has died a-borning.

WHAT, THEN? Can the world stand by and see these hundreds of thousands of helpless and hopeless individuals driven to the wall? The bitter reaction in this country, in England and elsewhere to the events of last week in Germany shows that the world has not yet grown so callous to human suffering or indifferent to manifestations of barbarism.

What can be done? Obviously, havens should be found for as many refugees as possible. But that is not enough. That is why the belief is growing that pressure must also be put on the German government to change its course, moral pressure, diplomatic pressure and economic pressure.

Already the summoning home of the American Ambassador to Berlin appears to have had a salutary effect on Nazi action against the Jews and Catholics. The effect may not prove lasting. But this type of pressure must not be relaxed. What is happening in Germany is of concern to all the world, like a war or a plague to which these events bear a striking resemblance.

CAN ECONOMIC pressure be applied to Germany? The answer is that it can but it may not be. Democratic nations do not apply totalitarian methods even in self-defense against totalitarian outrages. Yet the problem needs to be canvassed.

Another suggestion, open to the same objection, is that Nazi methods of propaganda ought to be turned against the Nazis. It is doubtful if the German people are fully aware of the revolt of world public opinion against what their rulers are doing. The demand is that they ought to be made aware of it somehow.

During the World War the democratic powers saw to it that their propaganda reached the German people. They can be reached today, if there is the will. There is also the suggestion that an international relief mission, headed by somebody with the prestige of Herbert Hoover, should be organized to take care, on the spot, of those unfortunates whose livelihood has been taken from them. The effect of such action, according to the proponent of this scheme, would be to bring home to the people of the countries where these unfortunates live the shameful actions of their governments. But whether the governments would permit such relief agency to function within their borders is not so certain.

THE PROBLEM of the refugees is a gigantic one. It can be solved only partially by mass and individual migration. It can only be solved effectively at the source. It is the existence of the totalitarian dictatorships that has created the problem. It is doubtful if it can be solved as long as these dictatorships exist in their present form.

Germany And The Jews

More Expressions Of Reader Opinion

What America Can Do

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One reason why the actions of the Nazi government seem so aggravating is the notion that we over here are quite incapable of doing anything about it. The fact is that we can do something about it.

We can, as already suggested, assist in establishing the Jewish refugees in new homes. It will certainly be a dark day when Americans turn a deaf ear to such a worthy proposal. Such action, however, is merely of a temporarily remedial nature. We should go further.

If we are to do something that will create a more penetrating and permeating effect for good, we must, unfortunately, perhaps, base our actions upon what many believe to be a presumption. That so-called presumption is that there actually exists such a force as world morality. Those who believe that the collapse of the League of Nations—due to a powerful few—and the questionable Munich pact are indications that there is no such thing are mistaken. Like religion, world morality depends upon belief. There is still hope of salvation.

Perhaps the most effective way that we can bring moral coercion to bear upon the criminal—and that is just what it is—German government is to discontinue diplomatic relations with them. The immediate consequences would unquestionably react in our favor. Except for Germany, Italy, Japan and the countries that they dominate we would probably win the praise and encouragement of nations all over the globe. Could Germany ignore the spirited and widespread arousal against her and the sense of shame and humiliation that might logically follow such an action? It is doubtful. She would either have to acknowledge her wrongdoings or prove herself thoroughly incorrigible.

Since our trade relations with Germany could be broken off without any serious financial or economic results, there remains no reason for not releasing ourselves from relationship with a government that exploits its minorities and otherwise indulges in practices incompatible with American beliefs.

Urges Boycott

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot refrain from expressing my views in regard to Hitler regime of Czechs and Jews. This will eventually involve us. I commend our President in his attitude toward them. But we should take firm stand by boycotting Germany in its present fiendishness toward the Jews.

Also something should be done to relieve their persecution if possible; we should organize a flood of relief for our brethren, the Jews, for the Lord says, "Thou art thy brother's keeper," and why not a liberator. One cannot do evil to his brethren and reap righteousness; the same holds true of a nation. Germany is on the road to ruin and decay. We all sprang from the Jew as sure as there was a Shem, Ham, and Japhet. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Wake up, America, and do something for these benighted people; we are supposed to be a Christian nation; let us act so, and do something for our brethren in distress.

What About The Chinese?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped that our State Department will maintain its equilibrium and not be stampeded into taking drastic action favoring one group or religious sect and ignoring the plea of another equally helpless people whose suffering is more terrible at the hands of another equally brutal dictatorial nation.

Tremendous pressure is being exerted on our State Department and screaming headlines in the press about demands favoring only one group while we go on actually aiding Japan in her depredations against China.

The United States of America has no sacred treaty with the Jews of the universe to defend them against aggression. We do have such sacred treaty with the Chinese. Wouldn't it be considerably more honorable and decent to meet our just obligations than to ignore them—in imitation of the very nations we condemn as aggressors—and let our sympathies lead us into championing some cause which is in no sense the official business of the United States of America?

'Cowardice' Deplored

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Der Fuehrer, or rather der fiend, pounds ceaselessly on an anvil with a hammer powered by hate and the bolts he forges for the destruction of a helpless people, make the demons in hell exult.

Here is a condition that derives directly from the cowardly course pursued by England and France for the past seven years. Man never yet gained anything by acting the poltroon. At Munich Hitler saw there was no limit to his power of coercing Chamberlain and Daladier; they left Czechoslovakia in the lurch, just as the way had been left open to Mussolini to gobble up Ethiopia, and it will not be long until Hitler will force France into returning Alsace-Lorraine.

E. B. SMITH.

'Our Back Yard'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before we proceed to become involved in a war with Germany and other central European powers to make Europe safe for the Jews let us take a look in our own back yard. With reference to our colored minority the treatment accorded those groups in Germany and America is closely analagous. Let us forget about Germany and proceed to clean up our own back yard.

One German's Indignation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My highest respect to Mr. Wegmann, the bricklayer, for the noble-mindedness with which he, as a German, expresses his indignation against Nazi barbarism. His statement is the more valuable as it represents the voice of the people which will not stand brutality and intolerance. Perhaps his uprightness will bring about in other German circles in America the same abhorrence and shame which it brought to him and every decent and feeling human being.

P. L. McDONALD.

Some Questions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like the rest of my fellow citizens, I have been horrified at the stories of persecution of the Jews in Germany. What I propose to write is, in no sense, an effort at justification or rationalization for such atrocities. However, like individuals, races can learn and grow through adversity. The Jews might well ask themselves why persecution of their race has persisted down through the ages and why it has broken out afresh in this modern era.

Why should a race with such a high percentage of talented individuals, which has contributed so much to the world's culture and advancement, be "looked down on" by so many Gentiles even here in America? Why, in many American towns and cities, are efforts made to exclude Jews from certain "high class" neighborhoods? Why is the word "Jewry" so many times used as a synonym for sharp and dishonest business practices? Why, in the minds of many Gentiles, are Jews considered inconsiderate of the rights and privileges of others?

It would seem that where there is "so much smoke there must be some fire." It may well be that there is a certain minority in the Jewish race that, through objectionable habits and actions, give to the whole race a bad reputation in the minds of many Gentiles. Frankly, I do not know the true answer. My suggestion is that thoughtful Jews might examine the sources of these reactions and prejudices and if any of the fault lies in the Jewish race or members thereof an effort by education might be attempted in order to eradicate any source of irritation and misunderstanding between Jews and Gentiles.

It is undoubtedly one of the outstanding tragedies of the world that this race of men, richly endowed with a high-average intelligence and with outstanding examples of genius in arts, letters and science—not to mention the commercial fields—should be so mistreated and thus hampered in their fullest development. I trust this letter will be accepted in the spirit in which it is written as a constructive contribution to the future welfare of the great Jewish race.

F. W. M.
Washington, Nov. 13.

Satirical Perhaps?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you Americans stop braying about treatment accorded Jews in Germany long enough to read what Germans think of you?

You are the most brazen group of braggarts, cowards and dollar worshipers that ever lived under one flag. Have you no sense of gratitude for our having turned back the Red wave? Aren't you having enough trouble with your Presidential purges, Dies committee, C. I. O., unemployment and a thousand other plagues which come from your being a nation of Dummkopfe without poking your snouts into Germany's affairs?

You cannot help the Jews, so why bellow as you do? (If we were near you, we would make you swallow all the bile you are belching forth.) Do you not have sense enough to know that everytime you open your mouths you cause a Jew to suffer in body, spirit and possessions?" Verily I say unto you if the cerebrum of one of you (I except such great Americans as Mark Sullivan and the Lone Eagle) were put inside a hollow mustard seed it would rattle like a birdshot in a wash boiler.

So my parting advice to you is to wait patiently and you will get yours in due time, and it is not absolutely necessary that we dirty our hands on you; the English, French, Russians, etc., will handle you without very much prodding from us. They hate you, and justly so, for your "they didn't pay us" sideline attitude.

In the World War when we were in a death grapple with our enemies you Americans stabbed us in the back and our Fuehrer will send you a bill for the damages in due course.

HEINZ.
Washington, Nov. 16.

Another Minority

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have followed closely the persecution of minority groups in this and other lands. I can't recall ever before so many persons answering to the cause and asking for mercy and leniency as those who have spoken for the cause of the Jews in Germany. Even the "greats" of this country have lent their voices to the cause. I consider this a wonderful act, but, I ask, can they overlook the downtrodden members of the Negro minority group in this country?

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

JUST HOW the Civil Service Commission is enlarging the old microscope that's placed on job applicants is illustrated well in the care taken in selecting young women for Indian Service teaching jobs.

First off, the Commission recognizes that the primitive existence to be undergone by an Indian Service teacher is no lawn party and one of the first considerations is on how well the gal seems likely to take it.

Once on a time, this was perhaps the major consideration, providing the applicant had a passable academic background. But now (and at this very moment the commission is grading a batch of applicants for Indian teaching jobs) the qualifications are stepped up to guarantee that the teachers have not only conventional educational background and the will to "take it," but also certain human qualities that make for rural adaptibility and understanding.

They must know how to stand the primitive loneliness, the isolation from everything normally familiar and also how to develop a sort of esprit de corp among the wigwams and lodges.

The announcement of the examination gave the clew to what the adventuresome young lady may be confronted with, and, inferentially, what the service demands:

"Most of these schools are located in isolated rural areas with meager resources where the land has been seriously depleted by overgrazing, recurring droughts and improper farm practices. They are often at some distance from the nearest white community, and in some sections where the Indians themselves do not live in villages, the schools are somewhat remote from human habitation.

"In the northern reservation and in Alaska, some schools are cut off for months at a time from travel communication. Ability, therefore, to adjust to association with a limited number of people in such isolated situations is essential to success in one of these positions."

Otherwise, as the Indian Office officials tell us, it's a trifle useless for the bored young lady to sit in her warm apartment of nights and pine after the bigger life in the adventuresome wilds. "They should consider what they're thinking about," the office spokesman said, adding that the record has shown girls with rural background performing the best service in the teaching jobs; that applicants must be under 40 and in good health. They'd need it, if they land a job out there.

Why voters shifted from the New Deal

Some say it's because the public disapproves of the New Deal's labor policies. Some say it's because business hasn't improved. Some say it's the New Deal's spending. Politicians may guess but The Gallup Poll found out the exact reason why. The Gallup Poll asked voters in every walk of life and in every income group why they shifted from the New Deal. "SERVICE DE LUXE." Universal picturization of a story by Bruce Manning and Vera Caspary, adapted to the screen by Gertrude Purcell and Leonard Spigelgass, starring Constance Bennett, with Vincent Price, Charles Ruggles, Helen Broderick, Mischa Auer, Joy Hodges, Halliwell Hobbes and Chester Clute. Directed by Roland V. Lee. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Morris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

A popular New York business fable is that of these miraculous bureaus which will do anything for you from walking the dog to clipping your coupons. "Service de Luxe" gives this legend a frail pictorial substance and permits Constance Bennett to play the glorified and platinum-plated little Miss Fix-It of Manhattan.

In essence, the show reveals the reformation of a career girl—through love, or is it masochism? Connie Bennett seems very natural as the prettily shrewish head of "Dorothy Madison, Inc.," an organization devoted to superintending all manner of details of its customers' private lives, but making them like it and pay handsomely for the services of the all-knowing Connie.

But comes a handsome but rebellious young man, who has been hornswoggled into becoming a client of Dorothy Madison and the whole business collapses into a flotsam of this thing called love. There are a few flashes of wicked temper, one wrong engagement, but they wash out as easily as a ripple on a lake.

For the Ladies

It cannot be said that Connie Bennett achieves any great personal triumph in this one. Probably that isn't her fault, for her material is unconscionably thin. She puts the usual Bennett lacquer on her work, is more beautiful than ever, and is dressed charmingly by Irene. All the women folks will be interested to know that La Bennett hasn't fallen for the high hair-do, but continues to look youthful, almost little-girlish, in a modified page-boy bob.

Just as important as Bennett is the appearance of Vincent Price as leading man. This handsome chap, you'll remember, played Prince Albert in Helen Hayes' "Victoria Regina" for two years. It seemed to us that he was still playing Prince Albert, minus the sideburns, of course. Mr. Price has the looks for the screen; he has a good sense of timing, a polished if glacial technic of acting. Do you recall that rowdy song hit of a couple of seasons ago, "It Don't Mean a Thing, If You Ain't Got That Swing!" That goes double for Hollywood.

For all of the laughs in "Service De Luxe," and there are quite a few of them, thanks should go to Mischa Auer and Charlie Ruggles. Mischa is a Russian chef, but really a Russian prince. Charlie plays a millionaire chef with a complex for cookery. Helen Broderick's good flair for comedy is stunted by a role that calls only for pop-eyed stares and caustic speeches. Pretty Joy Hodges works enthusiastically in a dumb-bell part.

Superlative Supplementaries

Plentiful and excellent are the added features at Keith's this week.

A sports picture of bird dogs, their training and bona fide hunting scenes, is probably the best picture of its type ever made. It is done in soft sepia tones, ideal for the depiction of scenery. The different types of bird dogs and their special advantages are clearly described, also the methods of training. But the culminating hunting scenes are the cream of this Grade-A short. You see the dogs quartering the grass and undergrowth systematically and intelligently, pointing like little statues, retrieving carefully and quickly. Best gauge of the picture's true fascination is that it evoked a flurry of applause.

"Donald Duck's Golf Game" shows Donald and his three nephews going forth on the links. It's all good Donald Duck, but you'll probably remember best Donald doing an under-water shot.

The Miami publicity machine, a New York society "baby party" (uncommonly silly) and a night club melodrama furnish another novelty film. The newsreel shows the new Manhattan excavating watchers' club.

Jitterpup Newest Movie Discovery

Introducing the jitterpup.

The first known jitterpup was cast in the "St. Louis Blues" along with Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour and Tito Guizar last week.

The part called for a dog who would dig dirt to the rhythm of "Dixie."

"Just start the music," the trainer of the jitterpup told Director Raoul Walsh.

When the music began to come in over the playback system, the dirt started flying. The dog, a mongrel, moved his paws in perfect rhythm to the music of Matty Malneck's swing band.

Paris Star Seeks Her Native Accent

Olympe Bradna for four years has been working to overcome her French accent.

That effort was reversed recently when Paramount employed an instructor to restore her accent.

It was for her role with Ray Milland in "Say It in French," in which she plays the part of a Paris bride.

Olympe came from Paris four years ago. At first her French accent was pronounced, but through constant study she whittled it down so that it almost vanished. That is why the studio had to employ Emile Luisoni, Paris language instructor, to restore the lost inflection for this role.

His Voice Changed

J. Farrell Macdonald's first role on the stage was that of a boy tenor! It's hard to believe that the gruff-voiced character actor who plays "Pop" Corrigan in Paramount's "Little Orphan Annie" could ever have had a high enough voice to sing tenor.

"THE SISTERS." Warner Brothers' picturization of the novel by Myron Brinig, adapted to the screen by Milton Krims, costarring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, with Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Ian Hunter, Donald Crisp, Beulah Bondi, Henry Travers, Alan Hale, Dick Foran, Patric Knowles, Lee Patrick, Laura Hope Crews, Janet Shaw, Harry Davenport, Ruth Garland, John Warburton, Paul Harvey, Mayo Methot, Irving Bacon and Arthur Hoyt. Directed by Anatole Litvak. Previewed Wednesday, November 16. At the Earle Theater.

There is more than any mere turning back of the clock to 25 years ago in "The Sisters." There is also embedded in the foundation of the Warner Brothers' picturization of the Myron Brinig novel a penetrating study of character and personality and those fundamental impulses that keep the human race alive. The study of three sisters who possessed remarkably divergent tastes and inclinations, to have sprung from the same parentage, is primarily the plumbing of the feminine mind and heart, but—

BELL.

Into the warp and woof of a flamboyant and exciting drama have been woven many of the extravagances of situation and action that may best be relied upon to capture mass interest and approval.

"The Sisters" was made for entertainment and fulfills its function admirably.

The exaggeration of many of its episodes is no more than the accent placed upon public taste as against strict realism and fidelity to human nature.

There is a good deal in the pictured narrative that the advocate of relentless logic will find it hard to accept, but at base the story is sound.

So let's go on from there.

Is a Reminiscent Drama

Pitched back into the period of the Teddy Roosevelt campaign for election to the Presidency in 1904, the Elliott family, with three charming daughters, is discovered in preparation to attend the Republican election night ball in an obscure Western city. The girls are not so tremendously unlike in this introductory interval of the tale, which, later, is to develop into an expansive canvas of conflicting human emotions. One seems to be on the verge of a happy marriage. Then, at the dance, she meets a young and energetic newspaperman from San Francisco, who falls immediately in love with her and she with him. They are married almost immediately and leave the parental roof for a life of high adventure in the outside world. The adventure was a little higher than even they anticipated.

In the meantime, the practical sister of the three solaces the deserted suitor for her sister's hand by coyly marrying him herself. The youngest of the trio, with a frivolous eye out for the line of least resistance, casts her lot with the elderly millionaire who promises her everything in the way of material wealth and not much else.

The drama bases its major appeal on the career of Louise Elliott, married to the sports writer, with lofty and chimerical ambitions and a more absorbing addiction to the fleshpots. Louise is the sister who has the hard row to hoe—but hoes its heroically and gloriously in the face of every impediment. Helen devotes her allurements to the single purpose of multiple marriages to men rich in the world's goods—and does very well in the accumulation of everything but character. Grace is content to ward off one or two minor threats to her happiness by placing full reliance in the resourcefulness and courage of her sister.

Embellishing these prime facets of the drama are turbulent scenes at the prize fights, the hip-hip-hurrah of politics and the devastating terror of the San Francisco earthquake. But it is Louise and her husband, Frank Medlin, who are the drama.

Bette Davis Is Real Star

The picture has been sagaciously cast. Bette Davis, in the role of the iron Louise Elliott, lends genuine force to her characterization, and, as one who, for once, finds it possible to ward off the degenerating influences of her environment as a sports writer's wife, takes on new stature as an authentic actress. Errol Flynn, as Medlin, plays with the steely immunity to tender feeling to be expected of an egocentric, fumbling through life for an eminence he did not deserve. The two play well together and account for the play's strongest hold upon an audience's interest and sympathy.

Anita Louise and Jane Bryan are the other sisters and perform their allotted tasks well and with the opposing methods the film needs for contrast and a further fulfillment of the melodramatic vigor for which it evidently was planned. As the parents of the titular figures in the play, Beulah Bondi and Henry Travers turn in performances of the solid merit to be expected from two of the theater's most able character artists. Alan Hale, Patric Knowles, Mayo Methot, Lee Patrick, Laura Hope Crews, Donald Crisp, Ian Hunter, Dick Foran, Harry Davenport, Paul Harvey and numerous others do much for the rounded excellence of a domestic study that cannot be gauged by any such placid story of home life as "Four Daughters," because it is executed in so much bolder strokes as to fall into an entirely different category.

Excellent Stage Bill

To balance the colorful nature of the screen feature, Producer Harry Anger has staged a particularly effective vaudeville revue at the Earle this week. The stage bill is headlined by those dancers so particularly popular in Washington, Chaney and Fox, who present a varied routine of expertly specialized numbers, ranging from the stately measures of the classic waltz to the latest craze of the jitterbugs. Two other acts vie with the dancing stars for first place in audience's estimation. They are the Three Weire brothers, in their marvelously timed songs, dances and instrumentalism, and Texas Jim Lewis and His Lone Star Rangers, always a hit in their songs of the plains and comedy.

Maintaining the high level of excellence in the less conspicuous spots on the bill are Don Cummings, a personable monologist and lariat twirler; George Byron, barytone of more than ordinary effectiveness, and the 16 Earle Roxyettes, who, this week, turn to skipping ropes as a further medium of demonstrating their all-around skill and versatility.

The Paramount News rounds out an entertainment of the first rank in all its departments.

Palace

Ronald Colman, one of the reliable remaining romantics of the silver screen, has a way with a cape, a couplet and a sword, as the second week of his pretending shows. "If I Were King" is galloping into its second week at Loew's Palace, and it seems he will "swashbuck" for quite a while yet.

Francois Villon, poet of the gutters, bon vivant of the cutthroat cafes of the slums of Paris in the time of Louis XI, robs the King's wine cellar and kills the King's chief constable, all in one night. As a reward for ridding Louis of the traitorous constable, Villon is made dispenser of justice for one week, at the end of which he is supposed to be hanged. During the week exciting events occur. Villon finds love, loses his gamine companion, Hugette, and learns how it is to have a shaven chin.

Colman may be past the first flush of youth, but his general effect is one of fluidity, graciousness, glamorous charm.

Basil Rathbone is a noble Louis XI. Some shades of his portrait are a bit frayed at the corners, but for the most part, he is superb, adding another gem to his collection of screen portraits. Frances Dee is lovely as consort Katherine, lady-in-waiting to the queen, who is part-time subject of Villon's verses. Ellen Drew, as Hugette, has a sort of "flaming youth" role which it is to be hoped does not ash down after one splutter.

The castle walls and parapets and paraphernalia are a bit weighty at times, but withal, in spite of the setting, the costuming and the mummery, this is an interlude for amusing you which we can recommend.

Fitzpatrick has a colored travelogue about "Cairo, City of Contrasts," which is one of the best he has done. There is a full clip of news, including shots of various persons speaking on the Nazi terror: the President, Thomas Dewey, Mr. Hoover and Al Smith. Highlights of the week's best football games show young men in helmets throwing themselves helter skelter around the field and making incredible tackles and touchdowns. Ed Thorgesen shows a young horse being trained and put through his paces at a show. For horse lovers we can think of nothing more enjoyable.—S. S.

Brand New Stunt

Mary Wiggins, famous Hollywood stunt girl sent by Cecil B. De Mille to Utah for scenes of "Union Pacific," discovered on arrival that she had forgotten her compact. What made it worse, in Mary's eyes, was that she was the only girl in a huge troupe numbering several hundred men.

BETTE DAVIS

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 18.—Some added highlights on the unveiling of Will Rogers' statue in Claremont, Okla. Jo Davidson, who did it, lives in Paris.

He came all the way to Claremont to spend one day for the unveiling. Incidentally, the statue was Jo's contribution and a replica of the one he did for the Hall of Fame in Washington, D. C., which has not yet been seen or placed. In the Hall of Fame, as you know, they allow two famous sons from each State. The other memorial, which is already there, is of the great Indian Chief, Sequoia, who originated the alphabet for the Cherokee Indians and helped them form their laws. Before that the Indians had no written language.

HEDDA HOPPER

Rogers was very proud of his Cherokee blood, and when people talked about Americans' behavior while greeting foreigners, Will would crack out with: "But my ancestors, the Cherokees, were already here, and they always knew how to greet the early arrivals." It never failed to get a laugh, but Will meant it seriously.

Will's statute stands on the highest point of the 30 acres he bought to build his home, which Mrs. Rogers donated for his memorial. His statue faces the rolling country below. He loved that view, as he did the vista from his ranch in Santa Monica, which swept out to the Pacific. Always, after a long tour, he'd chop down an acacia or eucalyptus tree which had grown too high, blotting out the view.

I think the most beautiful thing Eddie Cantor ever said was after Will's death. When answering a question as to why Will had to go, Cantor said: "I don't know why he died, but God has been having so much trouble and worry lately he must have needed Will to make him laugh."

Few people knew the incident which cemented their great friendship. Cantor, frightfully poor, was brought up by his grandmother, whom he adored. While he and Will were playing vaudeville she passed away. Cantor went completely to pieces, and instead of trying to lift Eddie out of his grief, Will sat down and cried with him.

Will's son, Jimmy, was given a pony which he called Wooligah, that being the mail address of the town where Will was born. They couldn't find out what it meant. Mrs. Rogers traced it while in Oklahoma. It means "bad weather." Jimmy laughed and said: "Isn't that just my luck—the pony's no good anyway."

You don't hear many of these. A youth flat-footed it from Flint, Michigan, to New Orleans, where he warbled in a night club. He was picked up by a talent scout—brought to Hollywood on a swell contract. He was met at the train by the usual barrage of photographers and so forth. Started going high-hat at that moment. After two snapshots, the newcomer said: "That's enough of that."

Later he sang at the Troc and was a hit. Wise guys said his voice was better than Kenny Baker's, and that he definitely was on his way up.

But his head took on the proportions of the sky. Didn't like stories submitted. Contract lapsed at that studio. Went to another one, repeating same behavior. Finally, all doors were barred. He's now back in the dive in New Orleans whence he came—a wiser but sadder boy.

The Marx Brothers drop scripts as well as gags. The other night on the air a whole page floated away. Bob Hope, star of the show, did a priceless bit of ad-libbing covering it up.

In Clara Bow's day you were a great tragic creature if you could cry easily. Marlene Dietrich showed us how to put over a story by the lift of an eyebrow. She was two years lifting the other. Will Rogers became great playing himself. Merle Oberon has gone simple.

And now Bob Burns' fans are begging Paramount to let him be Burns instead of trying to take Will Rogers' place.

"THE SHINING HOUR." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play by Keith Winters, adapted to the screen by Jane Murfin and Ogden Nash, starring Joan Crawford, with Melvyn Douglas, Margaret Sullavan, Fay Bainter, Robert Young, Frank Albertson, Allyn Joslyn, Harry Barris, Hattie McDaniel and others. Directed by Frank Borzage. Previewed Tuesday, November 15. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Joan Crawford dances again. Joan Crawford acts again. Joan Crawford again has a screen vehicle worthy of the considerable talents that recently have been thrown into regrettable eclipse by the shortcomings of film plays that were something less than adequate. Furthermore, Miss Crawford, in her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is surrounded by a cast of unusual balance and thorough-going excellence.

"The Shining Hour," revealed for the first time to the Washington public yesterday at Loew's Capitol Theater, is a splendid picture, despite the fact that it takes broad liberties with the Keith Winters stage play from which it was adapted. In its celluloid version, "The Shining Hour" is converted from a tragedy into an agreeable drama of domestic turbulence with a happy ending. This sounds pretty drastic, but the results are more satisfactory than might be expected.

Cast in the role of a smart night club dancer, intensely dissatisfied with her environment and eager to lift herself above it, Miss Crawford sails gayly into matrimony with the eldest of the Linden boys—scions of a staid old Wisconsin family, with enormous pride in family tradition. In the idyllic setting of the Linden estate, in the northern woods on the shores of a beautiful lake, Olivia Riley finds temporary happiness in the contemplation of a new home of her own planning. But she is a little too conspicuously out of the Linden tradition to fit snugly into her new surrounding. Her husband's brother falls desperately in love with her and his wife heroically attempts to outface the threat of her own happiness. Hannah Linden, the sister presiding over the family homestead, indulges an instinctive and keen distrust of the new member of the family. The nearby farmer boy further complicates matters by estimating the former dancer as willing prey for any adolescent impetuosity. The whole domestic situation becomes a bit of a mess. And then Olivia's dream house catches fire and the climactic episodes of the play rather shocks all of its pivotal characters into a sudden realization of what a botch they are making a circumstance that might more easily be resolved by rational means.

Is Lavishly Produced

As those familiar with the stage play are aware, there is pith and substance in the triangular developments of a story that has been treated lavishly in its translation to the screen. There is never a time during the romantic melodrama's development when one feels that any aspect of its production has been slighted.

The two most important roles in the picture are played with equal skill by Joan Crawford and Margaret Sullavan. They are played extremely well, with little to choose between them. Miss Sullavan's is the more sympathetic part, but Miss Crawford's by far the more colorful and diversified. The star's dances, with Tony De Marco, by the way, restore her to the top flight of cinema players who can desert dramatic acting for graceful terpsichorean effort on a moment's notice.

But the Misses Crawford and Sullavan are by no means the personifications of the picture's only claim to histrionic distinction. Melvin Douglas and Robert Young, as the more or less incompatible brothers, are in their best form. They play naturally, vigorously and effectively. So does Fay Bainter, as the sister who causes all the trouble—or, at least, more than her share of it. Miss Bainter's role is not a pleasant or a sympathetic one, and it undergoes a too sudden reversal in the final moments of the action, but these frailties in dramatic structure are not reflected in the player's performance. Frank Albertson, as the heart-stricken pastoral tippler and cornetist, adds to the variety of the play's personnel and Hattie McDaniels contributes an ebony study of a well-schooled maid, as Miss Crawford's personal servant held over from the night club days.

Mr. Perkins Is Back

Johnny Perkins, that jovial mastodon of merrymaking, returns to the Capitol stage this week to serve as master of ceremonies and share topline honors on the bill with Harriet Hoctor. Master Perkins, as usual, is hitting on all 16! So are Miss Hoctor's 16 talented coryphees and so is Miss Hoctor. Her "The Raven" solo ballet, introduced by classic ensemble, is by far the most effective number she has introduced during her two-week tenure on F street and was thunderously greeted yesterday afternoon.

The Radio Aces, singing trio from the airwaves, scored no less a success in their intricately arranged songs and the Fredysons, in springboard gymnastics that sometimes piles them up into the flies four-high, are experts in their strenuous line.

Phil Lampkin's combination classical and jitterbug overture is a vastly effective potpourri that almost brings the audience to its feet in cheers. It did bring the orchestra to its feet several times in acknowledgement of the tumult.

The Fox Movietone News completes an entertainment that is well up toward the top in excellence.

Stars' Stable Full Of Boarders

Robert Young and Allan Jones are thinking of hanging up an "S. R. O." sign on their Bolan Stables in Bel-Air because they are running out of space, due to a thriving business. Bob and Allan have 20 horses of their own, used for rental purposes.

Girl's Fiance Boldly Eyes Every Pretty Passing Face and Figure; Is This to Be Tolerated?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'm in love with a young man who worked his way through school and who is now in the Army. I have known him nearly two years and have found him to be worthy and dependable. He loves me and we are engaged to be married. But my problem is this—whenever we pass another girl on the street he stares at her until we're entirely past her. He makes such remarks as, "Hasn't she a pretty figure," etc. . . . When we are in a crowd, he always picks out the prettiest girl and stares at her until she thinks he is smitten with her

Outside of this one fault, he is perfectly grand and I admire everything about him. He isn't the jealous type and doesn't mean to be disloyal or to give offense. It is just his way. Do you think I would become accustomed to it in time, so that it wouldn't bother me? Or would it gradually destroy my affection? I don't think there is any probability that he will change. ENGAGED.

DEAR ENGAGED: As you see, certain brief, although highly significant, portions of your letter have been omitted. Judging from these quite as much as from the facts left in the record, I am of the opinion that your fiance's preoccupation with the charms of the fair sex is distinctly morbid in character, and, this being the case, that he is a very poor matrimonial risk. I think you must face the fact that some definite neurotic ailment underlies his indecorous behavior. I believe that in marrying him, you would find you had more to contend with than a mere progressive sense of humiliation and annoyance at having to share the burden of public opprobrium which his extremely bad manners invite. The best advice I can give you is to obtain a psychiatrist's analysis of this man's behavior, which, in my opinion, verges on the abnormal. You might take your problem to the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. M. H.

Strange Disfigurement

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Does a woman get bald prematurely? I have never heard of such a thing, but a friend of mine, just 35 years old, has recently discovered three or four small bald spots on the top and back of her head. She is worried and does not know what to do. Perhaps you can suggest some effective remedial measure. Thank you. CONSTANT READER.

Case for Internist

DEAR CONSTANT READER: As a usual thing, women do not get bald at any age, much less prematurely—although there have been instances, of course, where such a wretched misfortune has overtaken a woman. It is generally agreed that the health of one's hair is closely allied to one's general bodily health, and that systemic debility is quickly reflected in the condition of one's hair as well as in the condition of one's skin. Nowadays we hear a great deal about the relationship between glandular functioning and hair health. We hear about it from medical sources, and also we hear about it from spokesmen for the beauty trade.

Therefore, I would say that this particular case demands the attention of an internist—i. e., a specialist in the diagnosis and treatment of organic and functional ailments. It will be best to have the opinion of such a person as a starter; and if the condition requires the services of a scalp or skin specialist, I am sure you will be so advised. It may be that there is no remedy, and if such is the case, the person afflicted needs to be forewarned against spending time and money fruitlessly. Therefore, send your friend to a general diagnostician of impeccable repute. M. H.

Question of Etiquette

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Shortly after Christmas I expect to go with my boy friend to visit his parents, whom I have never met. His home is 200 miles from here and mother thinks I should not go with him unaccompanied—but, after all, this is 1938. We are not engaged, although we are very close friends. Do you think his parents might dislike me if we came unchaperoned? When I return, should I write and thank his mother for her hospitality? R. B.

Preposterous Plan

DEAR R. B.: If you wish to maintain any claim to good manners or good breeding, this trip is out of the question. In the first place, it does not appear that you have been invited by the young man's mother to visit her home. Therefore, it would be rank presumption to go. In the second place, supposing she had invited you, the trip should not be made in company with the young man unless such an arrangement had been indorsed by both sets of parents, through the medium of an exchange of correspondence between the two mothers. Only a mother so indifferent to her daughter's welfare as to invite distrust of that daughter's essential character would countenance so lax an enterprise. I think it very likely the young man's parents would sharply disapprove of you, and of your mother as well, if you carry out the plan you have in mind.

In regard to your second question—any house guest owes his (or her) hostess a prompt thank-you letter, which should be posted within 24 hours of one's return home. But the most inspired thank-you letter in the world could not atone for the bad manners of thrusting one's self, unasked, on the recipient's hospitality. I advise you to reconsider your hasty impulse in this matter, and to go your mother one better by deciding not to make the trip at all, unless and until the young man's mother insists upon your coming—to the extent that she is willing to write your mother about it. M. H.

Monastic Frock Dares Vintage Hues

Quite at variance with the monastic silhouette are the heady vintage hues combined in the crepe frock, above. Sparkling champagne is the tone of this naively smocked dress. The wide suede belt, accessories and veiled toque are the depth of dubonnet, burgandy or claret. Although the ecclesiastical looseness of fit is still popular, the waistline detail of this monk's gown is more flattering than the baggy fullness of its predecessors. Under the belt is a shirred elastic waistline, giving possibility for change of accessories. This frock was displayed at the last of the season's luncheon fashion showings at the Shoreham yesterday. Gowns were by Zarou and millinery by Young, Inc.

Quince Desserts Liked by Men

A fat piece of Sunshine Cake or some freshly made macaroons with colorful quince wedges make an ideal fruity dessert. And since quinces blend so nicely with other fruit flavors—with cooked quarters of apples, with prunes, or with thin slices of cooked orange a variety of combinations is possible.

If you like, you may serve the wedges with cottage cheese and chopped nuts as a salad, but most people, particularly the men, will vote for the quince dessert every time. I've yet to meet a man who didn't like canned quinces.

To preserve quince wedges: select ripe quinces, wipe off the fuzz and peel and core as you would an apple. Cut into wedges. Meanwhile make a syrup, using 1½ cups sugar to each cup of water. Place quince wedges in syrup and boil gently until tender. Pack into hot, sterile jars and cover with syrup. Seal at once. Be generous with your syrup. Some people like brown sugar in the syrup used for quinces.

Pink and Blue Effects Brighten Stodgy Rooms

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

This year it's a birdie with a turquoise bill—and he's graduated from the window sill to the wall. One of the season's most delightful papers has a very modern bird and bird cage—I'm partial to it in pink and blue on a white ground.

It would be as delicious for nursery or bathroom. But my favorite place for it would be a dinette or breakfast room—with maybe a kitchen to match. What a fresh chirpy place that would be to fly about your work in! I'd paint table and chairs a sparkling white enamel, add pink voile curtains—yes, pink—and get a not-too-deep blue linoleum.

In defense of all that pink and blue for dinette and kitchen, let me say that you can just about use any color anywhere—if your eye is sure. We have entirely too many color inhibitions anyway.

Take rust, green and gold for living rooms, for instance . . . I've got no personal grudge against it. But you must admit that it's been done to death. So if I had a room like that, I'd begin to inch up on it. Perhaps I'd use the gray cure—do over all the walls in a fine light gray and hunt around for a gray and yellow chintz to ring in. If nothing else, I'd add some smart gray cushions or some important looking pieces of gray pottery.

Then there's the green and orchid bedroom, once such a joy to behold, now as "out" as the Buster Brown bob. If I had a room like that, I'd try to inch the orchid out of the picture and introduce yellow in its place—trying for that freshness you see in daffodils or buttercups. Any odd tidbits of orchid that have to be retained would look all right with the yellow, but with yellow and green predominating, I'd have a newer, crisper looking room.

If your room is too dull and neutral looking, try some incisive shade to pick it up—magenta, jade, orange, scarlet.

Woman, 53, Successful Lives in East St. Louis 10 Lbs. Off in Month

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHENEVER I promise that you can take from one to three inches off your waist in only four weeks, or lose 50 pounds in a year, you are apt to treat it as another "pep talk" to bolster your determination. So, every now and then, I think it helps to pass along some of the jubilant letters from women who have done just as well—and some of them even better—than they were led to expect.

Somehow, slimming always seems easier when you hear that someone else has gone through it and lived to tell the story—especially if the outcome is successful, as it is in an amazing number of cases. The first letter is from a reducer in East St. Louis, Ill., and it will seem as if it were written directly to the women of 50 who have been wondering whether they are too old to try slimming:

"At the age of 53 I decided that I had to do something about my figure, and I began to exercise consistently. At the end of four weeks I was astonished to find that I had a nice, flat tummy. I am as supple as I was at 30 and, needless to say, I am continuing to exercise every day. In addition I take a long walk daily. I felt very encouraged the other day when a doctor I had not seen for ten years told me that I looked more like 43! My skin is nice and smooth with scarcely a wrinkle—but I think this can also be credited to good care. What I have done I know almost any woman can do. And I feel so young! It's glorious! I am 5 feet 5½ inches tall with these measurements: Bust, 36 inches; hips, 38 inches; waist, 26 inches. I weigh 140 pounds."

She is 53 and has a 10-inch difference between the waist and bust measurements! That is a figure to be proud of at any age.

For your further encouragement here is a letter from St. Louis, Mo., which will go a long way toward convincing you that you can almost lose your excess weight on schedule:

"When I started on your reducing diet last Easter Sunday, I weighed 198 pounds, and now I am down to 151 pounds. It was no trouble at all after I got started and I really enjoyed it. I added more fruit to the menus, so that I wasn't even hungry. All my friends think it wonderful that I could lose all that weight without getting a wrinkle, and my skin is nice and clear."

Forty-nine pounds in seven months without a wrinkle is as good a record as you could wish. As a matter of fact I only wish that all of you could do as well. Just one more letter . . . this one from one of the "Twenty-One Day Dieters" in Caledonia, Mich.

10 Pounds Off in Month

"Inspired by this diet, I have lost 10 pounds in one month, and, as you promised, 1½ inches off the waistline and half an inch off the hips, even though I did not take very much exercise. Also, I ate a bit more than your restricted menus permitted, and still I lost! I want to tell you, too, that your daily menus enabled my sister-in-law to lose 43 pounds in one year."

Letters like those are from reducers who went right at their diet and exercise and who made a good job of slimming—just as you can. You couldn't ask for more positive proof that you can make your figure over and look and feel better for doing it.

Learn to Budget Your Income

WHAT a strain the Browns put on their marriage—always debating about whose turn it is to get this or that!

By going on a budget plan they can remain the good pals they really are. In one evening they can plan their spending program for the year.

Simple to decide how much of their monthly income they can afford for food rent, running the house. The rest of their money they'd split according to their special desires and ambitions.

That rug Mrs. Brown wants would come out of a special savings fund that they build up for furniture, a car, other things young couples want. Mr. Brown's new suit would come out of his clothes fund.

And what a lot of things the Browns will get that they didn't believe they could afford. For you never know how much you can afford until you budget, get it all down in black and white.

Cleverly you see you can snip a bit from your house operating fund by buying soaps and scouring powders in quantity at sales. You can save some of your clothes fund by making over a couple of dresses. You can spend less for food by avoiding out-of-season fruits and vegetables.

And then—you see these savings will pay for the club membership which would mean so much in nice friends, good times!

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Mrs. DeGoofey's Thanksgiving

The Thanksgiving dinner this year is going to undergo a startling reform if Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, has her way.

"I have long felt that the Thanksgiving dinner should be civilized—or at least regulated," said Mrs. DeGoofey in an exclusive statement to this column. "Now my league proposes to act."

"Surely, Mrs. DeGoofey, you don't intend to cut down on the food!" the interviewer anxiously interrupted.

"Oh no," was the assuring response. "I have given up on that front. For years I campaigned for a sane Thanksgiving dinner with only two vegetables and one dessert. But—well, people being what they are, I have decided that the only thing to do is to regulate these orgies in the interest of public comfort.

Safety First For Guests

"Consequently the Do Something About It League has drawn up the following rules:

"That guests be limited to close relatives and only necessary in-laws.

"That instead of a festal board, which has probably been the scene of more undeclared warfare than any battlefield in history, a series of small tables be arranged to permit segregation of guests. For instance, there could be a table for children, one for newly-weds, one for sons-in-law and brothers-in-law who were prosperous, one for those who were not; one for guests who had had too many cocktails before dinner; one for nosey relatives who ask embarrassing questions, and one for the say-what-I-think guests who could fight it out among themselves.

Potatoes Aloof From Cranberries

"That there be a conversation code permitting no mention of absentees; no mention of the new hair dress; no mention of Roosevelt."

"But aren't you going to do anything about the food, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Oh yes indeed. First, we are going to abolish any carving of turkey at the table—a procedure that has caused more marital rifts than all the blondes in existence.

"We are also going to require plenty of elbow room for guests, or in lieu of that, require that all food be cut in small pieces before being served.

"Then we are actually going to abolish the over-crowded Thanksgiving platter. You know—the one in which the cranberry juice gets all over the potatoes and the turkey gravy mixes with the pickled pear."

"No! Impossible, Mrs. DeGoofey!"

"Yes! We are going to demand that each guest be provided a large tea tray in lieu of a plate so that every article of food may retain its nationality. 'No League platter' is our motto."

"Wonderful, Mrs. DeGoofey."

A Fair Field And No Favors

"And that's not all. We are going to abolish this nuisance of finding someone at your elbow with some more of this or that just as you are in the midst of a piece of gossip or a favorite story. We are going to put everything on the tables, fire a gun and then let it be every fellow for himself."

"Then the sky's the limit on food, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Absolutely. Only get this—it's most important of all. We are requiring that all hostesses provide couches in the Roman manner to which the guests may repair between courses and on which they will be required to remain at least a half hour following the dinner.

"Thus we hope to lighten the ordeal of that awful Thanksgiving afternoon when you must go into the living room and be charming and entertaining to pay for your dinner while your stomach is bulging with chestnut dressing and pumpkin pie."

"When will the guests go home, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Just as soon as they are able."

"Does that complete your program?"

Don't Be 'Good Pal' To Men, Warns Dancer

American Girls Termed Too Comradely
Mme. Davilova Urges More Aloofness
Advises Against Aping English Women

By Genevieve Reynolds.

THE HAIL FELLOW, comradely attitude never inspires love. It lacks dignity and mystery. And that is the failing of both English and American women. This is the opinion of Mme. Alexandra Davilova, glamorous premier ballerina of the Ballet Russe, who bases her statement on close observations of women in all parts of the world.

"English women have bad technique," said Miss Davilova. "They deal with men in the same way that a man treats another man. Therefore, they fail to become to the man more than a pal, and stand forlornly aside while he makes love to the more subtle continental woman. American women to their great detriment are aping these English tactics with their easy, frank manner. If American women expect to be successful in love they must stop their apparent mad race for independence and perfect the art of keeping the men guessing."

Both French and Russian women are adept in the tricks of love making, says Mme. Davilova. Their reserve creates an air of glamour that men find fascinating. American women should pattern after them, she believes. Be different, she advises, never the same, if you would avoid a monotonous personality. Above all, never let a man feel too sure of you.

"Don't slap a man on the shoulder and share the tasks—such as building a bonfire, opening a door or picking up your own handkerchief," she warns. "Rather let him do those things for you. Furthermore, make him feel that it is an honor for him to bestow attentions on you. You can do this if you will be dignified and aloof."

Aloof Yet Friendly

By aloof, she does not mean hard boiled and exacting. She thinks women should be human, sympathetic and understanding—but not in the big brother manner.

"All men like flattery," she said. "Some more than others. For example, to win an elderly man you must flatter him and make him think that he is all important to your happiness. The young man is more egotistical and his interest increases with your indifference. Men of all ages like competition. They want the woman that others admire and the one that is hard to get. Keep in mind that the charm is usually in the chase and not in the captured prize."

Fragility, dependence, sweetness and utter feminity are qualities that attract real men, she maintains. Good grooming is also essential, for men like to feel proud of the women they take to public places and introduce to their friends. A woman should make herself as attractive as possible and wait for the man to make the first move. Aggressiveness frightens him away. Men have the idea, says Mme. Davilova, that all women want to snare them into marriage.

"Instead of chasing him make yourself inaccessible when he attempts to rush you too much," she advises. "If you don't have other engagements feign a few when he asks to see you. This will pique his curiosity and arouse in him greater determination to see you again. But if you are too eager to see him, he will shrug his shoulders and say, 'why bother, she will be waiting for me.'"

No Dutch Treats

"Should a girl ever go Dutch on a date with a man—that is pay her own expenses?" Mme. Davilova was asked.

"Not if the woman wants the man to be a lover or husband," she replied emphatically. "That would destroy whatever protective feeling he has and as soon as that vanishes you are just like another man to him. Already you American women are working too hard to be independent and by so doing lose the very thing you want. Let the man feel that he must pay for whatever you want or wherever you go so he can keep his pride and he will worship you for it."

Asked for a method of meeting desirable men, she offered none. "I don't know," she said surprisedly. "In my life as a ballet dancer I never had any difficulty in meeting them. I suppose you would have to be seen places where they are and make yourself so alluring that they will seek you out."

"Gracefulness and personality" added Miss Davilova, "attract men more than the outward shell of beauty. Dullness is inexcusable and unnecessary. You can develop some individual tricks or hobbies that will give you life."

As a parting shot, she said, "Drop the friendly manner and remember that the woman who gives, gives and gives—seldom gets."

Slender, Stylish Design Revealed In Girdle Frock

A BOOST to your chic, a lift to your spirits—this versatile new Pattern 688 is exactly what you've been waiting for! As you know, the girdle dress is one of the most talked-of fashions, and you can depend on it that Claire Tilden's latest style is a treat to wear and to make. Why not stitch up the afternoon version (with long or short sleeves) in the very chic light grapetone shade of silk? Then use a deeper harmonizing tone for the girdle that draws in the waistline! You'll want the tailored version, too, probably in a cozy wool. With a narrow self-belt, and buttons matching the ascot scarf, it's another grand success. Note the new silhouette—the softly bloused bodice with a slimming panel and a slender skirt!

Pattern 688 is cut in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4⅛ yards 39-inch fabric and 1⅛ yards contrast.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 18.

PERHAPS you have read of the dream-book reconciliation of that Viennese darling, Luise Rainer, and her playwrighting husband, the spectacled and very histrionic Clifford Odets, who is also a reformed actor. Oh, it is ALL so beautiful. I could positively SCREAM. The story ripples that they were brought together by a Broadway lawyer named Nizer, doubling as Cupid.

ALICE HUGHES

Luise is a very shy and quiet little critter. Mr. Odets (where is thy sting?) has a very strong personality. I have never faintly imagined how they could possible get on as a team. But here they are, in each other's arms once more in New York and the newspapers. He has a play coming on. "Rocket to the Moon," it's called. She, a heartfelt disliker of Hollywood, though she is a two-time winner of the Motion Picture Academy "Oscar," wanting to act on a stage again. I waited on her in a suite at the Waldorf. She is a charming spectacle, though she seems to care little about clothes and grooming. Maybe it's the artist in her. When I saw her, she was wearing a knitted ensemble and a mop of unruly hair. She is Garbo's only living rival in the tousled-hair sweepstakes. Sweden verses Austria—pardon me, the Ostmark of the Third Reich.

She's been reading plays, she tells me—400 of the pesky things. The field has narrowed to a show about a "virginal White Russian whose officer lover is wounded in the Revolution." Those are her words. "In Austria I was a stage actress, not a movie actress," she says. She belongs to the diminishing company of theater die-hards like our own beloved and honored Helen Hayes and Kit Cornell.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Top gift of the week, in my view, is a new Sterling silver pill box—neatly monogrammed. Just the thing for your girl chums or boy friends with 1,000 nameless aches and pain. The hypochondriac's delight. What a cute sight at the luncheon table. Maizie slipping out the lovely silver box—but instead of drawing a coffin-nail she takes out and bolts a shiny globule stuffed with vitamins XYZ . . . Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, author of the best-selling, "The Yearling," is grinding away a dramatization of her first novel, "South Moon Under," for production this year.

Politicians usually devote themselves to kissing babies for the cameras, but our precedent shattering little mayor, Signor La Guardia, gave one of his Tucson, Ariz., school teachers a great big smack the other day, when the lady, Mrs. Lynna Stockton, got back from abroad. "Prettiest teacher I ever saw," quoth His Honor. "He always finished his lessons first," said teacher, ending the greatest public red-appling of the week. . . Big Fifth Avenue store opens a milk and cookie bar on the children's floor this week. Eating between meals again, hey? . . . And a local French milliner has cooked up a new hat-color called star-sapphire. Said to look just like the stone. But how can it, ducky? . . . I hear Katie Hepburn has just declined a role in a new play. Does that mean "Freckles" will play Scarlett O'Hara?

The glove industry has certainly pepped up in the past few months. Following the finger-tree glove, now all over the nation, comes one called pick-a-pocket—with a zipper that frees the thumb and forefinger to allow us to extract the nickel for a phone call from the keys, mints, notes and things in the handbag. Corset History Is Revealed in Local Showing

Reflects Social Trends
Iron Girdles Worn
Some Were Sewed On

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE ANCIENT art of the corsetierre has been subjected to many whims and flights of fancy. Strange conflicts of morality and liberality apparently clashed in the minds of these former guardians of feminine modesty. But at least, the antique undergarments which focus the center of attention in the windows of a local department store, prove anew that the moderns are not the only designers possessed of vision and a sense of humor.

The so-called 1938 hour-glass curves prove far more comfortably upholstered than the corresponding 1650 hour-glass, a compressing affair of silk brocade, fine linen and mean little bone stays, exhibited in this corset showing. Another girdle of the Louis XV period brings the present-day Antoinette style craze to mind. This droll girdlierre, of yellow silk brocade and black bodice, was apparently aimed toward propagation of the French race. Its apertures were designed for nursing of infants.

The not too exacting modern woman is satisfied to wear but one girdle at a time. Not so, back in the era of the broad minded Louis XVI. One original iron corset of this extravagant period boasts a duplicate but less obstinate silken teammate, which is worn beneath the metal one. Most fantastic of these "padlocks and girdles of chastity" is a crinoline foundation of embroidered silk. It is cut in three parts, a basic section and two side panels. The fact that the heaving belle was literally sewn into her corset upon her every public appearance, probably accounts for the Eighteenth Century passion for smelling salts and fainting spells.

High Blood Pressure Merely a Symptom

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

There have always been two ideas as to the nature of high blood pressure. One school holds that it is an essential disease, due to changes in the arteries, the kidneys and the heart. The other believes it is only a symptom due to some internal disorder that can be corrected, or habits of life that are unhygienic.

Two medical officers of a Hartford, Conn., life insurance company, Drs. William R. P. Emerson and J. Grant Irving, have been carrying on an investigation which seems to prove to them that high blood pressure is only a symptom and that it can be largely corrected.

They took the employes of the insurance company at the home office and examined them along these lines:

1. A health history to ascertain causes of impaired growth and the development of nervous instability.
2. A phyical fitness examination.
3. A check-up on 20 faulty health habits.
4. A check-up of daily programs of living from the time of rising until bedtime at night.
5. A check-up of food habits, including the total daily intake of calories, the amount taken at each meal, the balance and the vitamin content.

So far as high blood pressure was concerned, they found that out of a group of 1,020 men, 130 had high blood pressure.

An average of one physical defect and four faulty health habits was found in this group.

Overweight was considered the cause in 40 cases, habitual overeating, with its resultant by-products, being more important than the overweight itself.

Habitual overfatigue, indoor living, lack of regular exercise and faulty food habits were considered responsible for the high blood pressure in other cases.

The 20 faulty health habits which were most frequently found were:

No regular rest periods.
Habitual overeating or undereating.
Insufficient exercise or indoor living.
Fast eating or washing food down.
Irregular bedtime.
Irregular bowel movement.
Worry and fretfulness.
Candy or sweets between meals.
Excessive use of tea, coffee, tobacco or alcohol.
Eating when overtired.
Inadequate vacations or rests.
Habits injurious to health.
Working in poor air above 68 degrees F.
Physical defects uncorrected.
Irregular habits of living.
Finicky about food.
Overdoing at work or play.
Irregular meal times.
Sleeping with the windows closed.

ELECTIONS AGAIN CONFIRM ACCURACY OF GALLUP POLL

—But The Real Significance of Gallup Poll Is In Its Continuous Survey of Public Opinion

The hairline accuracy of the Gallup Poll was never more clearly demonstrated than by the New York elections. The New York Daily News poll predicted that Dewey would win. The Crossley Poll also predicted that Dewey would win. The Gallup Poll predicted that Lehman would win; that Lehman would get 50.2 per cent of the votes. Lehman was re-elected and carried 50.7 per cent of the votes. The trend of public opinion on important social and economic issues which are rarely decided by vote or ballot is also revealed by the Gallup Poll, whose accuracy was proved in the elections.

With its finger directly on the public pulse, the Gallup Poll has been able to foreshadow many coming events by revealing the direction of public thought. And today it becomes even more vital that every citizen know in which direction public opinion is running. For in a democracy, where public opinion is all important, the wishes of the people are reflected sooner or later in the acts of the lawmakers.

As Hitler announces that Germany wants its colonies back, what do Americans think? From the Gallup Poll of October 14th, you know that Americans are 4 to 1 against Germany getting back the colonies she lost after the World War. And on October 28th the Gallup Poll shows that British voters say, 4 to 1, they would rather fight than hand back the colonies.

White House Planning Suites for King, Queen

First Lady Prepares Monroe Room Parlor Debutante to Visit

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

PLANS ALREADY are under way for the White House visit of Great Britain's King and Queen, Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday. The first reigning monarchs to be entertained overnight at the White House, the royal visitors will be given choice quarters, but if, as it is rumored, they have 40 people in their entourage, some of them will have to stay elsewhere. The first lady pointed out that it would be impossible to have a company that large staying in the Executive Mansion.

Tentatively, arrangements are being made for the king to occupy a suite on the northeast corner of the second oor, and for the queen to have the suite across the hall. If these plans hold, the royal couple will share the Monroe room as a sitting room, and that end of the floor will be shut off from the other part of the house.

Good Chance To Study History

The suite under consideration for the king includes what is known as the Pink Room, a smaller bedroom and a bath. The queen's bedroom, under the tentative plan, will be the Lincoln study, at one time Lincoln's office, and not used as a bedroom until the Hoover Administration.

If the royal visitors share the Monroe room as a sitting room, they will have a good chance to study a few pages of American history in suitable setting. An inscripion on the marble mantle explains that the room first was used for Cabinet meetings during President Johnson's Administration. Portraits of the President and Mrs. Monroe hang on the walls, and there is a plaque to indicate that the treaty of Peace with Spain was signed within those walls.

Mrs. Roosevelt uses the Monroe room to receive small, informal groups, and there she holds her weekly press conferences. It contains a piano, desk, several small tables and deeply cushioned chairs and a sofa.

The King and Queen may spend one day at the World's Fair, Mrs. Roosevelt said. Other arrangements for their visit in the United States are still incomplete, or at least unknown to her, she added.

Eleanor, the Deb. Arriving Next Week

The First Lady then turned her attention to other topics. She said her debutante niece and namesake, Eleanor Roosevel, and her mother, Mrs. John Cutter, of Dedham, Mass., would be White House guests the latter part of next week. Although the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will not be in the Capital at that time, the debutante and her mother are coming to attend the Black and White Ball at the Mayflowed on Saturday night.

Miss Roosevelt will return to Boston shortly afterward and be back in Washington again after Christmas, when she will be feted at a ball given by the First Lady on December 27.

Asked who would be invited to White House party, Mrs. Roosevelt said the company would be made up chiefly of friends of her niece, daughters of officials and some friends of her owns sons and daughters. "It definitely will be a young people's party," she added.

Leaving Tomorrow With the President

Still negotiating a schedule that would keep the average woman in a continuous state of exhaustion, Mrs. Roosevelt had a full calendar yesterday. Following a speech at the Washington Hotel in the afternoon she went back to the White House to receive Senora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua.

Last evening, Mrs. Roosevelt lectured in Baltimore, going on later to New York. This morning she will be on the program at the Book Fair at Wanamaker's department store and then will make a speech at a luncheon of the American Association of University Women. She will return to Washington by plane this afternoon and tomorrow she will leave with the President for Warm Springs, Ga., where they will spend several days.

On Tuesday of next week she will be in Birmingham, Ala., to give a lecture, and then will return to Warm Springs to be with the President for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Rafter Fetes Miss Mary Wells

Mrs. Grant Rafter entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Miss Mary Wells, daughter of Hewitt Wells, whose marriage to Rudolph Kauffmann 2d will take place next Saturday at Epihpany Church.

Senora de los Rios To Entertain Today

Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, will entertain several friends at tea today at the embassy. The Ambassador returned last evening from a brief stay in New York.

Senorita Laura de los Rios will join her family here on Wednesday from Wellesley College for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Mary Dora Thompson To Make Debut Here

Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone have issued invitations to the debut of the latter's daughter, Miss Mary Dora Thompson, on Friday, December 2, from 5 until 7. The party will be held at the home of Theodore Noyes, 1730 New Hampshire avenue, where Capt. and Mrs. Hempstone are living this year. Mrs. Hempstone is a daughter of Mr. Noyes.

Bedtime Story

Farmer Brown's Boy Seeks Aid

Get some one else to do for you That which you find you cannot do.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy had left Aunt Sally's abruptly. "I have an idea!" he had exclaimed, and away he went.

Aunt Sally chuckled. "That is just like Tommy," said she, talking to herself. "He doesn't waste any time. He gets an idea and right away he is off. He can't stop long enough to explain it. I wonder what he is up to. I suppose it is something to do with getting rid of these pesky Rats. I hope so. I am beginning to despair."

It was something to do with getting rid of those Rats. He had tried to trap them and had failed. They had been too cunning for him. They had outwitted him. He had wished that he had a Ferret and had started to explain to Aunt Sally that a Ferret is a member of the Weasel family, and right there that idea had popped into his head.

"I hope that Shadow is still living in that old pile of stones," muttered Tommy as he hurried home. "He was there the last time I was over there, but that is some time ago and Shadow is likely to travel considerably."

Who was Tommy thinking about? Why, Shadow the Weasel, of course. He long ago earned the name of Shadow by his ability to appear and disappear, so that sometimes he seems to have no more substance than a shadow. Of all their enemies the smaller people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows fear Shadow most, for Shadow is a killer. There are many who kill for food, kill because they must have meat in order to live, being unable to eat other food. Most of these, however, kill only for their immediate needs, for food. Shadow the Weasel kills not only for food but also from a fierce and terrible delight in killing. Moreover, he himself seems to know no fear. Without hesitation he attacks those much bigger than himself. It is well that he is no bigger than he is, for he would be terrible, indeed.

Shadow's very boldness sometimes proves his undoing. The bold seldom are as suspicious as the timid. So it was with Shadow. He was still living in the pile of stones, and when Farmer Brown's Boy set a trap for him his curosity plus his boldness led him into it. It was a cage type of small-mesh wire, and when Tommy went to it the next morning he found a small prisoner in a furious temper. Yes, sir, he did so. There was nothing in his appearance to suggest fright on Shadow's part. On the other hand, there was something rather frightening. He was in a rage, was Shadow, and absolutely unafraid of this giant who had made him a prisoner. He arched his back and snarled and hissed at his captor.

Tommy grinned. Grudingly he admitted admiration for this fearless captive. "It is a good thing that your are no bigger than you are," said he. "If you were you would be a dangerous fellow to have running about loose. Now, just calm yourself. I'm not going to hurt you. I'm not even going to keep you a prisoner. I've got a little job for you, and it is a job you will like, so quit your snarling."

Over to Aunt Sally's the captive was taken. "For goodness' sake, what have you there?" asked Aunt Sally.

"A policeman to chase the racketeers out of your house and off your premises," replied Tommy chuckling.

"He doesn't look like a policeman to me. Why, he isn't half as big as one of those Rats," declared Aunt Sally as she peered through the wires at Shadow.

"This is a case where size doesn't count," replied Tommy. "You'll see when I turn him loose."

"Don't tell me that you are going to let that little fellow loose with all those Rats! cried Aunt Sally.

"That is just what I am going to do. But first I want to make sure that your Hens are all shut up, and that there is not even a Mouse hole in the henhouse. He might make a mistake and go Chicken hunting instead of Rat hunting, and that would be just too bad," replied Tommy.

Dance to Honor Rebecca Trucco And Her Fiance

The Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco, and his daughter, Miss Marta Trucco, will give a small dance at the embassy this evening in honor of Miss Rebeca Trucco and Robert Knowlton, whose marriage will take place next Saturday at the embassy.

Among other parties scheduled for the couple is a dinner at which William K. Ryan will entertain Wednesday, later taking his guests to the theater. The former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson will give a dinner for Miss Trucco Tuesday evening.

Miss Caroline Cecil entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Trucco and Mr. Knowlton. There were about 50 members of the younger set present.

Mrs. Joseph Cecil, mother of the hostess, poured coffee, and Mrs. Russell Bennet served cocktails. The tea table was centered with peach-colored roses and there were pink gladioli in the drawing room of the Cecil apartment at 2029 Connecticut avenue.

Stock Sale Ends In Man's Arrest

Washington police, accompanied by a Security and Exchange Commission special agent, yesterday arrested Charles Otis Davenport, 60, of 1332 I street northwest, and held him for investigation. Davenport is one of 11 salesmen recently indicted in connection with the allegedly fraudulent sale of $300,000 in stock of the Suwanee Life Insurance Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

The commission, in an statement issued November 4, said that the indictments were returned in the United States District Court at Orlando, Fla., October 26, charging Davenport and the others with conspiracy to violate the mail fraud statute and the securities act of 1933.

An SEC official said about $300,000 of the insurance company stock had been sold in Southern States.

Atlanta Contests Validity of Coal Price-Fixing Act

Counsel for the city of Atlanta yesterday attacked in District Court the constitutionality of the Bituminous Coal Act and denied the authority of the commission to fix prices.

Chief Justice Wheat and Justice Adkins of District Court, and Justice Miller of the District Court of Appeals heard the municipality's arguments that it would be irreparably damaged if the commission should fix the price of coal according to the preliminary estimates it has published regarding production costs.

The city, in its bill, set out that it buys thousands of tons of coal from producers in Kentucky, and that it contracts for a price far below the costs estimated by the commission. Should the price of coal be fixed according to the commission estimates, the city said, its school and other budgets would be thrown far out of balance.

Culture Decides Who Is Crazy, Dr. Dorn Reports

Persons who have become soothsayers, medicine men, prophets, or group leaders, would be incarcerated under other conditions, according to Dr. Harold F. Dorn, of the United States Public Health Service.

In a report issued yesterday, he declared:

"Fundamentally, even though there is a definite physical basis for many mental disorders, mental disease . . . is a cultural concept and varies from one group to another."

The report predicted that one out of every 20 persons born in 1938 would be committed to a mental hospital. It pointed out that 47 per cent of the Nation's hospital beds are occupied by mentally ill patients; that these patients have increased 40 per cent in State hospitals since 1926.

Nice and Brown Honor Post's Safe Drivers

13 Are Congratulated 90-Day Records Perfect Circulation Employes

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Four Washington oPst circulation department employes and nine tube route distributors were honored for safe driving records yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and Govn Harry W. Nice of Maryland.

In letters to the individual drivers, Maj Brown and Gov. Nice congratulated the winners of a 90-day safe driving competition and lauded hTe Post for its continuing efforts to promote highway safety, both within the District and in adjacent Maryland counties.

The 13 men were honored for completing the contest period without a single mishap. The campaign was conducted by O. Robert Scott, country circulation manager of The Post, and his assistant, Winston W. Watts.

"Outstanding Contribution"

Said Gov. Nice:

"As Governor of the State of Maryland, and being deeply interested in traffic safety, I wish to offer my congratulations and best wishes to you and to the circulation department of hTe aWshington oPst for the outstanding conrtibution in developing this program of safe driving."

A similar message was received from Maj. Brown.

The winners were J. D. Britt, traveling representative; Grant D. Warner, J. P. Brumbaugh and Clarence Shope, district managers, and A. G. Kirkman, G. E. Warner, R. O. Miller, R. D. Landis, Dewey Cook, G. F. Collins, F. S. Kite, J. D. Roberts and Wiley Swindell, tube distributors.

40,000 Miles a Year

The competition started June 1 and ended September 1. In selecting the winners, however, a careful examination of the driving records of eacmh man was made for the period from October, 1936, through September, 1938. In cases where even a minor accident was reported in this period, the names of those involved were removed from the list of winners.

It was estimated that each circulation employs and tube route distributor drives an average of 40,000 miles a year. On this basis, it was pointed out, The Post circulation department has a record of 3,760,000 miles of driving with no serious accident reported.

Meanwhile yesterday two District motorists received The Post Metropolitan Police certificates of "service to public safety" for outstanding acts of courtesy and caution on city streets."

Two Win Certificates

The certificates, offered by the Life Underwriters Association, were presented to John H. Stevenson, 2272 Sixth street northwest, and William W. Beeson, 1757 Q street northwest.

Policeman Adam M. Arney, touring in the Police Department's "safety car," selected the two men for awards. Stevenson, Arney reported, drove from Military road and Nebraska avenue to Sixteenth street northwest without violating a single law. He signalled all his intentions to stop and turn and used the proper traffic lanes for turning left and right.

Beeson merited recognition, said Arney, for abiding by the 15-mile-an-hour speed law within school zones. At one point while he was being followed by Arney, Beeson brought his car to a complete stop to permit a group of youngsters safe crossing on Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

80-Foot Ketch Ordered Sold At Auction Here

The 80-foot ketch, Normona, which was scheduled to sail for South America in August, 1937, was ordered sold at public auction yesterday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue to satisfy claims against the vessel.

Sailing under Capt. Robert Ferguson Muir, the two-masted ship got as far as Solomons Island, Md., on its projected trip. Several members of the crew filed a libel in admiralty against the ship and her master.

Judge O'Donoghue acted favorably on a claim of M. M. Davis & Sons, Inc., ship builders of Solomons, for $579.60 with interest from June 15, 1937, and costs.

Claims made by Howard P. Beach, jr., Sam Lovenbeim and Walter H. Wright were dismissed. O'Donoghue directed that final judgment for Everett Rogers be entered for $18.85 and costs.

Arrangements were made to sell the ship after six days notice from yesterday.

Warring

took control of the questioning of Swain, who revealed Thursday that Emmitt Warring put the cost of bribes at from $400 to $2,000 a month.

"Did you go into any details of the protection?" the court asked.

Swain said he had not.

"Did you ask him (Emmitt Warring) to whom the money was paid," Justice Laws pressed.

Swain had not, as far as he remembered.

"Was the figure an approximate one?"

Swain said the figure had been given to him both by the month and by the year.

"Did you ask him if he had any records concerning this protection?"

Swain said that he could not remember, that he did not think Emmitt Warring gave him such details.

Self-Explanatory

"In any talk with Sadur, or any talk with Scherr, did you make any inquiry about the character of persons to whom it was paid, police or some other agency?"

"I don't recall that we ever went into that," Swain said.

"Did you ever discuss with them the kind of protection, what it consisted of?"

Swain said he did not think so, that "the protection, in itself, indicated what it was."

Swain said he found "Rags" cautious when he went to Atlanta to interview him about the discrepancies in the income tax returns. When he was convinced that his visitors were from the Internal Revenue Bureau, Swain said Rags told him that all his money came from the numbers business.

This is considered important to the Government, which has placed in evidence reports of expenditures by the Warring brothers for houses, automobiles and other things. This took much more money than the Warrings reported their income to be, District Attorney Pine told the jury.

"He 'Rags' said he didn't have any money at the time the numbers business was started," Swain related. "I recall also that he told me to see his brother, Emmitt, who was the business manager, about the income. Charles didn't give me any idea of what the income was and he said he did not know. He could not even give me an estimate, he said."

Swain told how Leo Paul Warring revealed his losses taking bets on the horse races. Leo Paul told him, he said, that "he had lost several thousand dollars bookmaking and had gotten the money back from the numbers business."

Nor, said Swain, did "Rags" know how much money he had taken out of the numbers business.

Swain was shown the Government exhibit purporting to list the automobiles bought by the racketeers in the years in which their tax returns placed their individual incomes as from two to almost twenty thousand dollars. These included two LaSalles, a Ford, a Buick and a Packard. All were bought in the names of relatives or employes of the numbers gang.

Swain Cross Examined

Rover was the first to cross examine Swain, keeping him on the stand the rest of the day. The defense lawyer stresses the fact that only 11 pages of work sheets supposed to have been submitted to the Treasury by Sadur were bound together. The sheets were those on which Sadur and his staff worked out the gang's income. Swain's receipt, which he identified when Rover showed it to him, was for 14 pages.

"We are going to try to find those three sheets," Rover remarked. The testimony developed that the 11 pages apparently were the complete file on the subject.

At no time, Rover drew from Swain, did the Treasury agents who investigated the Warrings ever tell them the Government's idea of what tax they ought to pay. The agents merely kept on challenging the brother's figures and the accounting processes by which they were derived.

Swain said he found 57 mistakes in arithmetic in the Warring's account books. He indicated several of these, some for considerable sums, others for trivial amounts.

Swain was turned back to the occasion when Emmitt was questioned about the money he spent which appeared to be so much more than he reported as income. He then said, Swain and other witnesses have testified, that he borrowed $30,000 from Eddie Killeen, gambler, who was killed in 1935. When asked to swear to this he said he did not wish to make an affidavit "that somebody could come at me for $20,000."

"It might well have been that the affidavit might be filed in the Killeen jacket, too," Swain said, and added that Emmitt was told of this. He said Emmitt deliberated for some time whether he would swear to his statement about the loan, but never did.

The Warrings had a reputation in the rackets for paying off their bets, Swain once testified he learned.

Former District Attorney Goldstein, counsel for Scherr, asked Swain briefly about a sworn statement submitted by Scherr.

Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell are defending the three Warrings. Whelan was the next to try to pick flaws in Swain's evidence. Whelen trotted out the gang ledgers in which the mistakes in addition were found. He pointed out that the big errors were on Saturdays. Next he made Swain add up the gang's outlay for salaries and commissions for the weeks which the Saturdays ended. Several tests of this sort showed that when this overhead was added to the money paid out to betters the total was approximately the same as the totals at the bottom of the loss columns. In other words, Whelan suggested, the error was not an error at all, but resulted from the expenses being put in with the losses. Swain agreed that this might be the case.

"But the figures don't come out even," Assistant District Attorney Wilson drily commented each time. "Adding in these expenses ought to account for the 'errors' exactly if that is the true explanation. But it doesn't."

Sniper

Murray's body and one of which entered Mrs. Brown's hip.

That the killer was the same colored man who killed another motorist and wounded still a third in that vicinity was definitely established yesterday. Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert, said that the bullets taken from Murray's body matched those fired at the others.

At a conference between Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police here, and William Garrett, chief of Montgomery County police, it was agreed yesterday to forget the line that separates the District from Maryland and to have policemen of both forces cross it at will.

Maj. Brown announced that the reward for the killer had been raised from $100 to $300. State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, recommended that the county commissioners offer a reward of $250.

Thursday night was the first time the sniper had bothered about robbery. In the other cases, he simply emptied his gun and fled, a circumstance which convinced the police that the man they are after is a homicidal maniac with an overpowering lust to kill.

Mrs. Brown told police that when the killer found only $5 in Murray's wallet, he began firing. Murray was killed outright. The killer then forced Mrs. Brown to get out of the car, telling her that if she screamed he would return and blow out her brains.

The terrified woman stood bleeding for more than an hour. She was found clinging to a fender by R. H. Nye, of the 1800 block of Mintwood place northwest, who took her to Georgetown University Hospital, where it was said last night that her condition was favorable.

A week ago last Thursday the sniper killed Edward Roper, 31, colored, who was in a parked automobile with another man and two women. He made no demands for money, simply firing into the car and disappearing.

Twenty-four hours earlier, the sniper stepped on the running board of a parked car on the Brookeville road off the East-West highway and fired at the occupants, John Clements, 33-year-old Government Printing Office employe and a companion. Three bullets struck Clements, one in the head, another in the leg and a third in the arm. However, he was not seriously wounded. His companion was not struck at all.

Police were informed last night that a sniper operated in the park areas of Philadelphia and Wilmington last summer, killed three persons and was never apprehended.

The Canadian prime minister was a guest at the White House Thursday night after he participated in the signing of the new United States-Canadian trade agreement.

Charlottesville Woman Marks 101st Birthday Just a-Rockin'

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Perkins

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Perkins went a year beyond the century mark today, surveyed the passing scene from her newspaper's headlines and sat 'a rocking by the window where there's sunlight for her reading.

Mrs. Perkins was 101 years old today and she saw no particular cause to make a lot over it. She felt pretty well, her eyes and hearing "arent's quite what they used to be" but withal life is pleasant for her.

Being 101 apparently doesn't call for the celebration that comes when the round 100 mark is reached. On her last birthday they held a formal party. She was living in West Virginia at that time with a daughter who since has died.

Now she is living here in a red brick house on Maple street, the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. L. Cave.

Mrs. Perkins said she believes the Almighty has permitted her longevity and well-being because, in her more active years, she always visited the sick and dying, administering aid to all she could.

Trial of Trio In Md. Killing Set for Dec. 1

2 Women Arraigned Innocent, Their Plea Escort Files Likewise 5 Others Involved

By the Associated Press.

Prince Frederick, Md., Nov. 18.—Trial of two young women and a man for the murder of William Warren Gantt, eccentric and wealthy farmer of Port Republic, was set for December 1 today by Circuit Judge William M. Loker.

The three defendants were brought here for preliminary arraignment today from Baltimore, where they have been in jail since July 22. Pale after their four-month incarceration, Walter Stinnett, 24, Drum Point; Mrs. Margaret Abell, 18, Dowell, and Mrs. Evelyn A. Bajowski, 24, Baltimore, pleaded innocent to the charges.

The arraignment came shortly after four other persons charged with accepting money known to have belonged to Gantt's estate received suspended sentences for one year with the provision they make restitution of $100 each. The money was allegedly given them by a fifth defendant, Mrs. Blanche Stinnett, 30, wife of the murder defendant, who was remanded to the Upper Marlboro Jail for sentencing on a charge of stealing $960 from the estate. All five pleaded guilty.

Suspended sentences were given James and Daisy Fowler, of Cove Point, mother and father of Mrs. Stinnett; Benjamin Franklin Thomas, 73, Cove Point estate caretaker, who has already returned the $100, and Nena Walton, 24, of Dunkirk.

Mrs. Stinnett, despite her guilty plea, told the court she found the money while loading tobacco in the slain man's barn.

Gantt, 55, was found dead July 12 at his home in Parkers Creek community with six bullet wounds in his body. Police said approximately $1,000 had been taken from him.

Stinnett and the two women were arrested two days later in Fredericksburg, Va.

Plans Pushed For Span Over Shenandoah

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 18.—Active agitation for a new bridge across the Shenandoah River at Harpers Ferry, linking Jefferson County, W. Va., and Loudoun County, Va., to replace the one washed out in the 1936 floods, was heard from interested West Virginia and Virginia people at a meeting of the Charles Town-Ranson Board of Trade here this week. As a result, resolutions have been adopted to be presented to proper State authorities after they have been signed by various trade and civic groups in the affected areas.

Virginia spokesmen included H. C. Thompson, member of the Virginia Assembly from Loudoun County, who said Virginia had appropriated $42,000 to rebuild one of its roads to connect with the bridge, and that the Virginia Highway Commission is ready to cooperate with West Virginia in building an approach to the bridge in addition to a modern road to connect it with the Virginia State system. A. T. Arnold, Leesburg, highway engineer for Loudoun County, pledged county co-operation.

The co-operation of Gov. Homer A. Holt of West Virginia was reported through Postmaster Thomas R. More, who said he had discussed the question personally with the chief executive.

Distressing business conditions at Harpers Ferry were blamed by Mayor Lewis Nichols largely on the virtual atrophy of the town from normal trade because of lack of bridge facilities.

Harpers Ferry and the Loudoun County area just across the Shenandoah are now entirely separated as far as cross-river trade is concerned. To get from one area to the other long trips via either Brunswick, Md., or Bloomery, some miles south on the river, are necessary.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 18.—Members of the Association of Commissioners of Revenue devoted a morning and afternoon session today to a detailed discussion of New State tax legislation and other matters related to their duties.

$156,776 'in Red' Overdrawn Accounts Held by State Body Nine Have Credits

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 18.—Red ink spotted the State Roads Commission fiscal statement today, with 14 of Maryland's 23 counties showing overdrafts in their lateral roads funds accounts.

The accounts, representing a statement of county expenditures of their shares of the gasoline tax proceeds, showed the 14 went into the red for a total of $156,776—which must be made up from gasoline taxes.

The deficit, which compared with a credit balance of $47,881 for the nine remaining counties and Baltimore City, left a net overdraft on the commission's books of $108,895.

Deepest in the red for the year was Allegany County, overdrawn $40,302, with Washington County showing the next largest debt, $36,095. Caroline County was overdrawn $19,294.

Other counties overdrawn, and those with credit balances, were:

Overdrawn — Anne Arundel, $5,687; Calvert, $408; Charles, $7,601; Frederick, $2,255; Garrett, $18,812; Howard, $2,118; Kent, $9,383; St. Marys, $2,595; Somerset, $437; Talbot, $11,013; Wicomico, $770.

Credit balances—Baltimore $13,323; Carroll, $8,874; Cecil, $3,222; Dorchester, $908; Harford, $4,176; Montgomery, $2,530; Queen Anne's, $3,870; Worcester, $6,725; Baltimore City, $4,249.

Other completed fiscal year figures showed the Roads Commission had spent $68,639 of its $100,000 appropriation for convict labor camps since the prison program got under way in June.

Prince Georges County figures were not included in the commission's statement.

Central Beats Eastern, 19-15, for City Title

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

As long as a football is shaped as it is—and capable of taking a crazy bounce—there is no such critter as a lock bet when two teams take the field. That is why unbeaten Georgetown, trailing its proudest record in 40-odd years of football history, is only a 1-to-4 shot to beat a six-times-beaten Maryland team today.

POVICH.

If ever a team appeared to be outclassed today, Maryland does. Licked by scores that resemble Nazi election returns—including a 53-0 massacre by Syracuse — Maryland appears to be a bit presumptious even in taking the field against Georgetown. On the sidelines fettered to the bench by injuries, will be Jim Meade and Pershing Mondorf, the two players who might possibly have given Maryland a chance to win today's ball game.

Yet Maryland this afternoon must be rated as no worse than a 4-to-1 shot. A long pass, an untimely fumble, a weird bounce, a drastic penalty . . . and Georgetown can, conceivably, lose, for such things happen in football. Because this will be a football game, Maryland always is entitled to hope.

Carnegie was not supposed to beat Pitt. Yet, what happened? The Redskins, supposedly the world's greatest professional team, met the Chicago Bears and the score was 31-7 in favor of the Bears. Columbia went to the Rose Bowl a few years ago tabbed as the weakest Eastern representative in history. Yet one of Lou Little's plays clicked and Columbia beat a supposedly unbeaten Stanford team.

Other Upsets Recorded

It can happen, too, in other forms of sport. Gene Tunney was supposed to be a push-over for Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia in 1926. Jimmy Braddock was a 10-to-1 shot the night he lifted the heavyweight championship from Max Baer. In what was tantamount to the calf slaughtering the butcher, Max Schmeling refused to permit his own execution and kayoed Joe Louis. Up at Saratoga in the Travers not so many years ago, Jim Dandy, a one-eyed plater, was a 100-to-1 shot in a three-horse race with Gallant Fox and Whichone. And the winner was Jim Dandy.

Yes, and the skeptics will probably say that if Maryland beats Georgetown this afternoon at College Park, the Potomac will turn around and run upstream. Well, it could happen, I guess, if it were loaded with sufficient gamefish.

At Georgetown, Jack Hagerty has seemingly molded an amazingly efficient team. He is in a mood to muster all the old bromides and lavish praises on his line, "those seven workhorses who make it possible for the backs to gallop to glory." For Georgetown's line has not yielded a touchdown this season against opposition which has scored against such as the University of Pittsburgh.

Operating behind that line, Hagerty has a brace of backs in Joe Mellendeck and Jules Koshlap who are described as the hottest things in a football uniform in this area. Mellendeck with his punting, his slick gallops and his kicking is the ideal triple threat. And he can be pressed into service as a receiver for the ambidextrous passing of Koshlap, a superior thrower.

Hagerty Is Wary

But this game which ordinarily would appear to be a pipe for Georgetown finds Hagerty wary nevertheless. He is old in the ways of football and he knows that the greatest enemy his lads must battle today is over-confidence. With Maryland will lie the psychological edge for whatever it might mean, and in football's past it has meant much.

And today, Georgetown's athletes may attempt to surpass themselves in a grand effort to present the Hilltop with its first unbeaten team in G. U. history. And therein lies the chief fear of Hagerty. It is a game of undergraduates, after all, and extreme intensity of effort is to be feared, because it makes for over-wrough performances. It wrecks precision and undoes weeks of practice.

Maryland will be operating from the vantage point of the under-dog and that, to Coach Dobson, is important. Over-confidence is not among his anxieties. He can dismiss any fear that his lads will be taking the game lightly. As a master strategist he can play on the pride of his boys.

Because football is such a game as can be decided on such intangible items as alertness, spirit and mental attitudes, and because a football can take a freak bounce,

More than 3,000 wildly cheering partisans of Central and Eastern High Schools, almost a capacity crowd, filled the seats of Central Stadium yesterday as Central's gridders came from behind to beat Eastern's defending champions, 19-15, and earn undisputed possession of the 1938 Inter-High fotball crown.

It was the Mount Pleasanters' sixth consecutive victory, though throughout the first half there was a strong possibility of it being their first defeat. Eastern entered the contest on the extreme short end of the odds.

It took a lead midway of the first period when the ball came to rest on Central's 4 and Paul Cohill, Eastern half, dropped back and hurled a touchdown pass into the arms of Bob Wolwine, end, across the goal. A Central offside penalty of 1½ yards, half the distance to the goal, brought the Easterners to the 1½-yard line for the conversion, and Junior Carroll neatly booted the ball through the uprights.

Fumble Aids Score

The touchdown was set up by the fumble of Central's fullback, Jim Porter, on his own 25 stripe. Ray Soo, Eastern back, recovered and two plays later Cohill threw another accurate aerial to Carroll on the 10, from which point Carroll slid to the 4.

Throughout the first period the Easterners hung tenaciously to their lead, but a poor Eastern kick in the second quarter brought Central into scoring territory and a long pass, Dick Farr to Benny Steiner, accounted for the host's first touchdown. On this attempt, when a knotted score depended on his placement, Steiner's long succession of good placements was broken, and Eastern still led, 7-6.

The game was only a few minutes older, however, before Central took a lead it never lost. This time it was an intercepted pass which Central utilized for the score. Soo attempted a long aerial from his own 30, but Buck Schlegel, of Central, rushed in to grab it and carry it to Eastern's 5-yard line. Three plays later Martin jogged over to make the score 12-7.

There was still a good chance for Eastern to win the game as the teams took the field for the second half. The third quarter had hardly begun, though, when Martin, of Central, slashed through the line for 16 yards to Eastern's 30, from which point Steiner aerialed to Clark over Francis Hallama's head for another score. Steiner again missed the extra point.

Third Safety

The third period was also marked by the third safety scored in the series this year. A bad pass from Harvey Doughty, Central center, to Steiner, caused the ball to roll over the goal line and Steiner was credited with two points for Eastern.

In the fourth quarter Eastern scored its second touchdown. Advancing to within five yards of a goal as the period began, an unsuccessful pass and the loss of six yards in three running plays gave Central the ball on downs. The Mount Pleasanters', too, were unable to gain through the line and lined up for a kick on the fourth down. Jimmy Kirk, Eastern linesman, blocked the boot and fell on it. From the 5-yard line Teague stumbled over on the next play. Carroll missed the placement.

The hard-fought tilt featured a number of brilliant tackles. In attempting a tackle in the second quarter, Toni Di Blasi, Central's ace line plunger, suffered what a physician who was present called a dislocation of the semilunar cartilage in the left knee.

Tom Armour Posts a 139 To Win Title

Bags 69 on Last Day Three Share Second Sarazen Scores 141 Cruickshank Falters

By the United Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 18.—Tommy Armour, of Chicago and Boca Raton, Fla., who hadn't won a tournament in two years, scored a brilliant 69 in the final round of the Mid-South Profesional Golf Championship here today to win the annual event with a total of 139 strokes.

Armour shaved par on both rounds, getting a 34 and a 35 to come in three strokes under the regulation 72.

Clayton Heafner, Greensboro, N. C., newcomer to golf ranks who worked in a Charlotte, N. C., candy factory until two months ago, tied for second with Johnny Bulla, of Greensboro, who shot a 140 and Craig Wood, of Rumson, N. J., who had 71, 69—140.

Gene Sarazen, veteran of Brookfield Center, Conn., had a 73 today for a 141 and next position in the field of 92 pros and one amateur. Jimmy Hines, Great Neck, Long Island, and Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., were next with 142s.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 18.—Leo Walper, of Washington, finished with an aggregate of 147 in the annual 36-hole Mid-South Open golf tournament, which was completed on the championship No. 2 course here today. Walper turned in a card of 76 yesterday and concluded today with 71.

Half Way Leaders Slip

Sarazen and Cruickshank tied for the lead at the end of the first round with scores of 68, but slipped up today. Cruickshank lost his confidence after taking fives at the eighth and ninth and Sarazen missed a number of greens with his seconds. Sarazen required 36-37—73 for a total of 141, and Cruickshank was 35-39—74 for 142.

Other leaders were Ben Loving, of Richmond and Saranac, N. Y., 144; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., 145; Mike Turnesa, Elsford, N. Y., 145; Leonard Gibson, Kansas City, Mo., 145; Frank Stuhler, Jamaica, Long Island, 146; Albert Alcroft, Youngstown, Ohio, 146; Leonard Ott, Denver, 146, and Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 146.

Lighthouse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, who started off his second round today with two birdie 3s, disqualified himself when he found he had started out with 15 clubs in his bag, one more than the rules permit.

Jules Huot, Canadian star from Quebec, became the first player to score an ace in professional competition here when he holed out with a spoon at the 185-yard sixth

G. W. Meets Bucknell; Cards at New Orleans

Bisons Favorites G. W. to Start Sartore Grady Is Left Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Pa., Nov. 18.—George Washington University's ever-changing backfield will include still another new face in the starting lineup tomorrow against Bucknell when Fred Sartore gallops on the field at Lewisburg with Billy Richardson, Murphy Booth and Frank Merka.

Sartore is a sophomore fullback, starting his first game of the season. He showed decided talent early in the fall but was sidetracked in the rush of other promising players.

With Bob Nowaskey moved back to end, Sartore gets his starting chance. Coach Bill Reinhart is confident Fred will handle the job creditably.

Richardson's fine running in the Kansas game won him the starting call over Vic Sampson at tail back, although Sampson is a sure bet to see plenty of action. Ken Batson, who was badly stunned on the theird play of the Kansas game, is expected to play tail back or quarterback part of the afternoon.

Tom Grady, soph signal caller, was unexpectedly left at home yesterday when the G. W. squad of thirty departed. Grady has not recovered from a leg injury received at Clemson, although Trainer George Lentz thought earlier in the week that Grady would be ready for action tomorrow.

Bucknell is in top shape after a layoff last week-end and is favored in the homecoming battle with the Colonials. The Bisons have not dropped a reunion game in nearly 10 years. Bill Lane, ace quarterback, who was injured early in the Georgetown contest, is back in the saddle and is expected to handle his duties in fine style.

The marked man in the Bucknell backfield, however, will be elusive Lou Tomasetti, whose forte is running back kicks for great distances. He played a major part in Bucknell's outstanding victory, a 14-0 triumph over Penn State.

Geo. Wash.	Position.	Bucknell.
B.Nowaskey	L.E.	Wenner

C. U. Drills at Loyola Held Slight Choice Game Is Tomorrow

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, Nov. 19.—Arriving this morning, 26 strong, the Catholic University pigskin warriors went through a peppery limbering up workout on the Loyola field in preparation for their intersectional game with Loyola of the South here tomorrow afternoon. C. U. is seeking its third victory in a row.

The Cardinals will be joined today by their heda coach, Arthur J. "Dutch" Bergman, who attended his father's burial at Peru, Indiana, Thursday.

Assistant Coach Forrest G. "Fod" Cotton, in charge of the squad during its trip here, supervised a workout on the Georgia Tech field yesterday afternoon during an eight-hour stop-over at Atlanta.

Today's drill was devoted to polishing the Catholic's running attack and sharpening the forward pass combinations. The Cards three candidates for the All-District eleven, Burke Vidnovic left halfback, Rocco Pirro, back as at his first string tackle berth and Johnny White, are expected to be bulwarks of strength in tomorrow's clash.

The improved work of the Cardinals line against Miami P. last week makes the Washingtonians favorites over the fighting Wolfpack.

To date the series between the two schools stands two victories for Loyola gaainst one for C. U.

LAZZERI

One report said Vitt had offered Lazzeri $10,000, one of the highest salaries ever offered a major league coach.

Apostoli Wins Fight In the 8th

Beats Young Corbett Referee Stops Bout 7,500 Fans Present New York Recognizes

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 18.—Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, lashing out with the fury of a maddened mule, scored a technical knockout over young Corbett, 3d, of Fresno, Calif., tonight at Madison Square Garden, thereby winning New Yodk State's recognition as world middleweight champion.

Referee Eddie Josephs awarded the bout to Apostoli after 2:01 of the eighth round, when Corbett sank to the canvas without being struck. Corbett was in such agony from three previous trips to the floor that he was unable to continue.

Young Corbett, an "old man" of the ring, took the worst beating of his 18-year career. Many of the 7,500 fans in the Garden were screaming: "Stop it! Stop it!" before the 33-year-old Californian finally wilted.

Apostoli Throws Punches

Apostoli, almost ten years younger than his opponent, was so infuriated by Corbett's awkward southpaw attack in the first two rounds that he cut loose with everything in his repertoire for the rest of the abbreviated battle. He threw punches from all directions and to all spots, many of them landing below Corbett's belt.

Frisco Fred's aim was so poor with some of his wild hooks that Referee Josephs gave the second round to Corbett on a foul. Many boxing writers thought Josephs should have given the fourth, sixth and seventh sessions to the former welterweight champion because of low punches.

But, regardless of who won what rounds, it became apparent after the third frame that it was only a question of time before the squat, bronze-skinned Corbett would be knocked out. Even at that stage, Apostoli's youth and punch were beginning to tell as Corbett began to stagger and slow up under Fred's crushing hooks to body and head.

Apostoli, who had been beaten by Corbett on February 22 at San Francisco, started to turn the tables with a vengeance in the seventh round, when he floored the Fresno veteran twice with right-hand smashes to the chin. Corbett went down for the count of nine, then the count of eight. But he rose gamely and fought back for nearly a minute, landing several straight lefts to the surprised Apostili's head. However, he was staggering and bleeding and virtually helpless when the gong sounded.

Devitt Wins Prep Title; Wilson Beats Riders

Scores 19-0 Victory Becker, Richards Star Former Scores Twice

Devitt scored a 19-to-0 victory over Bullis yesterday on the latter's field to win the prep championship of Washington. Led by Becker and Richards, the Devitt team scored in every period but the first. Becker scored two of the three touchdowns for the winners, and Capt. "Whitey" Crawford scored the other on an intercepted pass.

In the first quarter, the two teams battled on even terms. The punting of Devitt's Nick Zouras was outstanding. Devitt advanced the ball to the Bullis 12-yard line. On the next play Richards passed to Kemp, who caught the ball and then dropped it, and Jim O'Brien recovered for Bullis on the 1-yard line. The quarter ended as Dick Burrell kicked out of danger for Bullis.

Allemandi Fumbles

Devitt lost the ball on downs, and on Bullis' first play, Paul Allemandi fumbled, and it was recovered by Walker. Becker made 13 yards through center, and in two plays took the ball over for the first score. Jake Fleishmann's placement kick was wide, making the score 6-0. Both teams fumbled constantly during the game, which was hard fought throughout. The half ended after an exchange of punts with Devitt in possession of the ball.

Bullis kicked off to Devitt's Capt. Crawford, who returned to his 38. Georgie Simler broke through for Bullis and smeared two consecutive plays, forcing Devitt to punt on their third down to midfield. On the second play Nicholson recovered a Bullis fumble. With Nicholson and Jules Becker carrying the ball, Devitt marched down the field to Bullis' 4-yard line and Becker went over to make the score 12-0. Fleishmann's attempt for the point was low. After receiving Bullis., Paul Allemandi threw two passes to Ross Reed, one good for 33 yards as the quarter ended.

Devitt Line Holds

Devitt's line held and Bullis lost the ball on downs. Devitt moved the ball to midfield with Richards and Nicholson carrying. Zouras punted on the fourth down to the Bullis' 20, and Allemandi returned it to the 26. On the next play Crawford intercepted Paul Allemandi's pass and raced 28 yards to a touchdown. Fleishmann converted from placement, making the final score 19 to 0.

The play of Allemandi, Simler and Burrell, of Bullis, and Becker, Crawford and Richards, for Devitt, featured the game.

Bond's Passes Win Line Holds Roosevelt 1,000 See Battle

Behind the expert flinging of Frank Bond, Woodrow Wilson High School entered the win column of the Inter-High football series for the first time this season, and shoved Roosevelt farther into the cellar position by trouncing the Riders, 20—0, yesterday before a crowd estimated at 1,000 at Western Stadium.

The neat-passing Bond sent two heaves into the air during the second period that found a teammate on the receiving end, and the result wa s two touchdowns for the heretofore unsuccessful squad fo Coach Carl Heintel. The Presidents scored again in the final stanza to further agitate the boys tutored by Woody Woodworth.

Roosevelt, a team slightly favored to win before the proceedings got underway, was repulsed time and time again by the Wilson line. One lad in particular was knifing his way through to stop the Rider backs in their tracks. He was Burton Wood, who, besides his excellent line play, intercepted a pass in the final period and ran it back for a touchdown.

During the first stanza, neither team could muster enough offensive strength to get within scoring distance. But the Wilson attack began to function with deadly precision in the second quarter. Standing on his own 30-yard marker, Bond faded back and shipped a heave to Bob Miller that was good for 30 yards.

When Miller rested his feet on the earth, he found no enemy player within a country mile of him, and raced unmolested the remaining distance to the goal line. Bil Leaphart ployed straight through the center of the line for the extra point.

About five minutes later Bond again shot a pass to Buster Amorosa from his own 30-yard line. Amorosa gathered the ball in on Roosevelt's 40, and after a beautiful piece of broken field running, crossed the pay-dirt stripe with the second six-pointer of the period. Bond's attempt to rush the line for the extra point was unsuccessful.

Late in the, George Zuras was flinging pass after pass in a desperate tffort to put across a tally for Roosevelt. One of the heaves landed in the arms of Wilson's ace linesman, Wood, who ran untouched about 20 yards for the final touchdown of the afternoon. A pass, Bond to Nick Cokinos, was good for the extra point.

Loss of Temper Wrecks Precision, Baugh Says

By Sammy Baugh,

Forward Passing Champion, National Professional Football League.

The football team which loses its collective temper in the heat of battle cannot be an efficient team. That was strikingly demonstrated when the Redskins, national professional champions, were beaten, 31-7, by the Chicago Bears, a team that had lost four straight games.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I am not attempting to alibi the Redskins' defeat. It is too obvious that we did not play good football. What I do want to emphasize is that a team can make an absolute waste of weeks of intensive practice by a display of temper when the opening whistle blows.

The Bears, before the game, did not figure to beat the Redskins. We had won the league championship in 1937 and had lost only one game this season. On comparative records the Redskins certainly appeared the better team.

However, the Redskins' attack, and their defense, too, is based largely on timing and precision. When the Bears began to play a smashing game, piling on after the whistle blew and otherwise inviting retaliation, the Redskins fought back. They actually fought, with their fists, their knees and in any manner that they could.

It was the first time during my two years with the Washington club that I have seen the Redskin players deliberately rough. And, in attempting to play roughly, they sacrificed the timing and precision on which our game is founded. They played the worst football that day that I have ever seen in the pro league.

The natural question is, of course, why the Bears' game didn't suffer if they were equally as rough, which they were. But the answer is simple enough. The Bears were a bigger team. Their game is founded not so much on precision as on power. They suffered, of course, from the extracurricular stuff, but they suffered less than the Redskins. And, playing such a Redskin team as I have described, they didn't have much to beat that day.

I believe the Redskins can be absolved of using rough tactics inasmuch as it was in self-defense in a great measure, but I do have this to say: I do not believe that teams which go in for the rough stuff are playing fair either with their coaches or their fans.

In the case of the Redskins, Coach Ray Flaherty admitted it was natural enough for us to fight back, but that winning the ball game should have been our first concern. If our game had been up to form, we would have beaten the Bears and had our revenge in that manner. In effect, we threw down the coach who had spent his time with us patiently trying to perfect a game that should have been a winning game.

Rough stuff isn't fair to the fans because it doesn't make for interesting football. One outburst of fisticuffs might possibly add spice to a game, but I doubt it. And continual rowing ruins a football game. Any time a player is intent on rough stuff he can't be efficient in his job, and if that sort of playing is prevalent on both sides, the fans see a ragged game.

St. Andrews Threatens to Relieve Landon of Its 'Pink Elephant'

Washington's own version of a gridiron rivalry for the possession of a traditionally sacred object is renewed today on Landon Field when the brown-clad hosts play St. Andrews School of Middleton, Del., for the right to keep "The Pink Elephant" for another year.

"The Elephant" has been in a glass case at the Bradley Lane School for the past two years by virtue of victories both years over the Delaware rival. This year St. Andrews boasts a better than even chance of taking the little glass animal home with it, having won four of its six scheduled games.

The rivalry for "The Pink Elephant" began in 1932 when the two schools played for the first time. St. Andrews won that encounter, and as a consolation prize, awarded the local eleven a live Irish setter. Incidentally, the dog was Landon's mascot until last summer when he mysteriously disappeared.

In 1933, Landon won the game and its coach, unprepared to give St. Andrews' gridders a worthy consolation prize, fished a small, glass, pink-hued elephant from his pocket and presented it to the losers. Since then the policy has been to allow the winner to keep the tiny good luck omen one year. Landon, with only two victories in five starts, will be pressed to keep "The Pink Elephant."

Georgetown 4-1 Favorite to Beat Maryland Today

Terps to Gamble With Pass Offense

Have Everything to Gain in Attack
Hoyas Have Perfect Record
16,000 May Jam Byrd Stadium

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown, with nothing to gain and everything to lose, this afternoon will expose its perfect record and hopes of a bowl invitation to Maryland's downtrodden, but always dangerous Terps in the fifth annual renewal of their modern series. Game time is 2 o'clock.

Although Georgetown will be a prohibitive favorite, at 4 to 1, to revenge last year's defeat by Maryland and complete its first undefeated, untied season in 64 years of intercollegiate competition, a capacity crowd of 16,000 is expected to jam Byrd Stadium at College Park to see the game which arouses District fans like no other.

The setting is perfect for an upset which would take rank with the most astounding of the season. On one hand is mighty Georgetown, with perhaps the most powerful team in history; a team which has become increasingly strong with each game and which had bowled over seven opponents with a minimum of difficulty. On the other hand is disappointing Maryland, beaten and beaten badly in six of seven games, the worst ever record compiled by a Terp eleven.

Maryland to Gamble

But for all its failures, Maryland's season would be successful in event of a victory over Georgetown. Even an impressive showing against the Hoyas would be compensatory, in a large sense, for the terrific lickings taken from Penn State, Syracuse, V. M. I., Florida and it's other major foes.

Thus Maryland is prepared to gamble, shoot the works in the realization that whatever it accomplishes will be more or less a moral victory. It has often been written and the Terps also have overheard more than one person predict a Georgetown victory by four or five touchdowns. But those familiar with the Georgetown-Maryland rivalry are hardly so brash.

They remember the years 1934 and 1935 when underdog Maryland elevens, with utter disregard for the "experts" arose like spectres from the wreckage of dismal seasons to smite down the proud Hoyas.

They also recall that a victory for the freshman eleven has for four years presaged a defeat for the varsity. Georgetown's yearlings beat the young Terps, 21-13 yesterday.

Ignores Tradition

Ignoring tradition, however, it is likely that such "jinxes" will be smashed today. For never in the meetings of Georgetown and Maryland, which began back in 1899, has one team enjoyed the advantages that accrue to Georgetown. The Hoyas, on record at least, appear to have a far better starting team than Maryland. They have superior weight, speed and manpower.

Against the Georgetown line, which has yielded not one touchdown this season, Maryland will pit its forward wall, which has allowed more than 200 enemy points and which has been extremely susceptible to wide end sweeps of the variety for which Georgetown's fleet backs, Joe Mellendeck, Jules Koshlap and Lou Checas are famous.

To match Georgetown's great backfield, two deep in dependable reserves, Maryland has only Charlie Weidinger, an excellent forward passer; little Joe Murphy, a fleet but comparatively inexperienced sophomore halfback, and John Boyda, a fairly good blocker. The other capable Maryland backs are either permanently on the sidelines with injuries or so handicapped by injuries that their efficiency is minimized.

Maryland has in Weidinger, however, a young man who singlehanded may cause Georgetown no end of trouble, as he did in Maryland's 12-to-2 victory last season. Weidinger, a shifty runner and a smart field general in addition to a great passer, now for the first time this season is in good physical condition. Against Florida last week he completed 13 passes for a total yardage gain in excess of 150 yards.

Passes May Decide

A repetition of that performance this afternnon may change the complexion of the game. And Georgetown's pass defense is something of an unknown quantity. The Hoyas have not been called upon to face a marksman of Weidinger's caliber.

Eight Georgetown plyaers will conclude their college careers with this game. They are Joe Frank and Tom Robertson, tackles; Frank Donahue and Frank Gildea, ends, Bill Burke and Jim Hill, guards; John (Lefty) Riofski, center; Charlie Wychunas, quarterback, and Elmer Moulin, halfback. Of these Frank, Robertson, Wychunas, Hill, Burke and Riofski were regulars at some time this season.

Riofski, who suffered a fractured hand in the West Virginia game last Saturday, will not be in uniform this afternoon.

Navy Chiefs Scout Army

Watch Cadets Today Against Princeton
Whole Staff to Go

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Nov. 18.—The Navy coaches will descend in full force on Princeton tomorrow for the purpose of seeing the Army team, their opponents for the following week, in action against the Tigers. The coaching of the Navy team will be left in the capable hands of Capt. Pete Powell.

The fact that the soldiers play Princeton just a week before the service school game, gives the Navy people a good chance to give their coming opponents a final looking over, an advantage which the Army had last year and will have next season, as it became known here today that next year's team will play Princeton a week before the Army game.

Chances that Cliff Lenz, the 200-pound sophomore back, will be able to appear in the Army game, are growing dimmer. Lenz is still confined to the hospital with a charley horse received in practice last Monday and the medical men do not promise that he will be ready to play. Lenz, however, is hopeful that he will be back on the squad early next week.

In the meantime, George McDaniels, the slender and spirited lad from southwest Virginia, is being groomed for Lenz's place, which was first substituted to Lem Cooke. McDaniels, a good runner, passer and punter, weighs 40 pounds less than Lenz, however, and the loss of the latter would be serious, as the team might need a back of his type the worst way at some period of the game.

Lou Gray, who started the Columbia game in a wing back position, is also on the hospital list, and Ed Gillette has the call to start next Saturday. However, Gray is likely to be on the bench, and may see some action. It is his last year in the Naval Academy.

The varsity worked on defense against the Army team this afternoon, with Earl Rowse, a sophomore from Utah, representing Woody Wilson, the crack passer of the real Army team. Rowse is a sharp and accurate passer and gave the Navy defense plenty to do. Lou Burke, Dan Baughman and Clarence Corbett were all used at right end, the flank opposite Capt. Powell, who has no opposition. Any one of the three may start the Army game. Baughmann will graduate next June, and Burke and Corbett each have another season at the Navy.

Eight Unbeaten Teams Remain As Campaign Nears Its Close

Notre Dame-Northwestern Tops Day's Card
Terps Last Obstacle in Hoyas' Path
Georgetown Looks to First Perfect Season

By Henry Super,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—They begin hitting the end of the long, weary gridiron trail tomorrow and of the hundreds of teams which started the season with more hope and ambition than ability only eight—a "Big Five" and "Little Three"—remain unbeaten.

Georgetown, one of the "Little Three" group—mighty elevens in their own class which haven't had the opportunity to show themselves against the more nationally famous teams—finishes its season tomorrow against Maryland. Texas Tech, probably the best team of the small trio, tackles New Mexico and then has a date the following week with Marquette. And Western Reserve has its final game Thanksgiving Day against Case.

The hottest battling will be among the "Big Five"—Notre Dame, Texas Christian, Tennessee, Duke and Oklahoma—all of whom have opposition left which might fashion what some like to call upsets.

Irish Face Wildcats

Notre Dame, rolling toward its greatest season since Rockne, meets Northwestern tomorrow and Southern California on December 3, and, if the Irish get through those two still unbeaten, mark them up as the land's No. 1 team. Texas Christian meets Rice Saturday and the following week it closes against S. M. U., neither of which are easy meat at this stage of the season.

Tennessee has a day of rest, but resumes on Thanksgiving against Kentucky and winds up on December 3 against Mississippi. Oklahoma still has three games left—unbeaten but tied Iiwa State tomorrow for the Big Six Crown. Oklahoma Aggies the week after and Washington State on December 3.

Duke, not only unbeaten but also unscored upon, should preserve its perfect record tomorrow against North Carolina State, and then all it will have to do is lick Pittsburgh the Saturday after to keep its slate clean. That will be quite a job.

Saturday's program follows:

EAST—Yale and Harvard play their traditional game with the Big Three title at stake. A Yale victory will precipitate a triple tie among the Elis, Harvard and Princeton. Harvard can take the title with a victory or a tie. Other games: Unbeaten but tied Boston College against St. Anselm's, Syracuse-Columbia, Pittsburgh-Penn State, Army-Princeton and Fordham-South Carolina.

MID-WEST—Notre Dame-Northwestern and Minnesota-Wisconsin top the porgram. Minnesota and Wisconsin are tied for the Big Ten lead with three victories and one defeat each. Ohio State is third with three victories, one defeat and a tie. Michigan has two, one and one. The winner of the Wisconsin-Minnesota game can take the title outright. If it's a tie, Ohio State can win by beating Michigan or, if Michigan wins, it will cause a triple tie for the title among itself, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Other final Big Ten games are Indiana-Purdue and Illinois-Chicago. Oklahoma and Iowa State settle the Big Six race in their game while in a nonconference battle, Nebraska meets Iowa.

SOUTH—Duke, which already has clinched the southern title, meets North Carolina State in the only game of that conference. Three southeastern games pair Georgia-Auburn; Florida-Georgia Tech and Sewanee-Tulane. Tennessee, the leader, is idle.

SOUTHWEST—The four leaders all meet. Texas Christian, on top with four victories, plays third-place Rice while Runner-up S. M. U. meets fourth-place Baylor. Outside games pair Marquette and Arizona and Texas Tech and New Mexico.

ROCK MOUNTAIN — Utah can win the title by beating Wyoming. Third-place Brigham-Young meets last-place Colorado State. Idaho, of the Pacific Coast Conference, plays Utah State.

PACIFIC COAST—California, tied for the lead with U. S. C., meets Stanford in its last game of the season and Oregon plays Washington. U. S. C. is idle until Thanksgiving when it plays U. C. L. A. and it's still anybody's title.

Hoya Frosh Beat Terps

Score Is 21 to 13
Augurs Terp Victory In Varsity Contest

Maryland University Freshmen prophesied a victory for the varsity over Georgetown in the annual clash between the schols today, by dropping a 21-to-13 decision to the Hoya Frosh in a free-scoring game yesterday at College Park.

If tradition runs true to form Maryland will win, for the school that loses freshman game invariably wins the varsity contest.

The Georgetown Frosh held their own in the first half, and in the last half opened with a burst of power that was too much for the weary Terp players.

Four minutes of the game had passed and it found Maryland with its first touchdown. Merle DuVall, Terp back, on his own 30-yard stripe, whipped a 20-yard heave to Bill Shokey, who galloped to the Hoya 35. Again DuVall dropped back and found his mark in John Cordiac, Maryland fullback, who jogged 15 yards to a touchdown. A pass, DuVall to Bowers, added the extra point.

The Hoyas came back in the second quarter to tie the score. By virtue of a surprise 70-yard kick by Lou Falcone, Hoya back, the ball moved deep into Maryland territory. When Elmer Rigley, Terp back, attempted to kick from behind his goal line, the ball was blocked by a charging lineman, Paternoster, who dove on the ball in the end zone for the Hoya first touchdown. Blocis, snagging a pass from Ridgley, added the extra point.

Maryland got its final score in the third period by a "sneaker" play. With the ball resting on the Terp 30-yard stripe, DuVall again shot a bevy of passes. He moved the ball to the Hoya 40 with passes to Cordiac, Bowers and Rigley. Then Elmer Rigley, suf Terp back, unleashed a 15-yard pass to rangy Dick Greer, Maryland end, who had been lying unnoticed near the sidelines. Greer snatched the ball on the 25 and hurried across the goal. Bill Shokey's attempt for conversion was low.

Working two "Statue of Liberty" plays in rapid succession, Jim Shaw faked a pass and each time handed the ball to Ben Bulvin, Hoya back. Bulvin gained 30 yards on the two plays and moved the ball to the Marylands. Bulvin again crashed the line and landed in touchdown lane. Johnson added the extra point.

Jim Shaw paved the way for the fourth Hoya score when he intercepted DuVall's pass on the Terp 30 and, on a brilliant run, brought the ball within 6 yards of the goal, where Bulvin crashed over for the touchdown. Falcone hit the line for the added point.

St. John's College Abolishes Intercollegiate Athletics

President of School Attacks U. S. System
Terms It 'Semi-Professionalized'
Intramural Program to Be Expanded

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Nov. 18.—Intercollegiate athletic competition was ordered abolished at St. John's College today by President Stringfellow Barr in a statement which termed the American collegiate athletic system "semi-professionalized."

President Barr's order abolishing intercollegiate competition and greatly expanding the intramural athletic program becomes effective in September, 1939.

President Barr said the intramural athletic policy of the future at St. John's would primarily consider the pleasure of the individual student rather than the "spectator psychosis" which dominates the athletic policy of most American schools.

Athletic Director Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, and his assistant, John Donohue, tendered their resignations, effective in June. Barr announced. Their places will be taken by a tutor "combining a wide experience in athletics with a full understanding of the academic program," Barr said.

Intramural Program

The abolition of collegiate competition will result in devoting more time to "student pleasure, student health and due subordination of the athletic program to the serious purposes of the college."

Sports which will be included in the St. John's 1939 intramural program include six-man football, basketball, lacrosse, soccer, track, badminton, tennis squash, handball, boxing wrestling and water sports, Barr said. The college will provide six sailboats to take advantage of the unique opportunities for water sports on Chesapeake Bay.

St. John's will complete its 1938 athletic schedule, playing all games already arranged. However, all scheduled 1939 contests were canceled by the order abolishing intercollegiate competition, Barr announced.

The traditional "big game" with Johns Hopkins alone remains on the St. John's schedule. The contest, set for November 26, will be the fifty-sixth meeting between the two schools in the third oldest athletic rivalry in the United States.

St. John's is completing a "de-emphasized" schedule this year. Only five football games were scheduled. Of the four games played, St. John's has not won a contest nor scored a point. American University, Delaware University, Randolph-Macon and Swarthmore College have all scored one-sided victories over the Johnnies.

President Barr's order ends a brilliant record of athletic competition at St. John's third oldest college in the country. St. John's lacrosse teams have been intercollegiate and Olympic champions, and their

Aethelwold, Maryland-Bred Horse, Wins Meadows at Bowie

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

Honey Cloud, owned by former Jockey "Whitey" Abel, will be shipped to California for a try at the Santa Anita Handicap. The former selling plater has done about everything asked around Maryland this fall and his condition is a credit to the blue grass up in Alan Clarke's Huntington farm at Clarksville, Md. Abel sent Clarke a broken down Honey Cloud last spring and Clarke returned the gelding to the races as a fit and ready horse. Earl Sande, a former jockey, saddled Stagehand, the 1938 winner of the $100,000 race and it is not beyond the realm of possibility that Abel will send out the 1939 champion. Honey Cloud goes postward today in the $2,500 added Prince Georges Autumn Handicap, featuring the program at this track. The racoing secretary has shown great respect for the gelding by assigning his top weight among the starters of 116 pounds. It is unlikely that Honey Cloud will be the favorite, however. He will find plenty of opposition from Mr. Canron second to Aneroid in the Riggs. High Velocity, brilliant winner at Pimlico; Conqueror, winner of five straight before sprinting Honey Cloud here on opening day, Chance View, winner of this stake last year and several others. Four of today's seven races drew limit fields and, if given good weather, Bowie's first Saturday should be a profitable one for the track. I have a number of complaints about bettors being shut out or turned away without bets because of early closing of windows. The horses are being taken to the post faster than formerly hereabouts and, for some reason, the public seems to be slower making up its mind on selections. Everybody can't wait until the last minute and expect to get a ticket. Of course, the "tote" which allows betting until the horses break is the answer to the problem and it wasn't a little bird who told me that all the Maryland tracks will soon be forced to install the automatic form of wagering. Hurry the day.

BILL.

First Race—Billabong was a trifle short going this distance last out in New York and with that heat under his belt he should go well here. Ellacaw has raced well in better company but may have lost her edge. Sister Ann was a beaten choice at Pimlico and gets a good figure.

Second Race—Great Haste ran well in handicaps this spring, stands out as the class and has worked well for this event. Should win if sound. Nansemond closed strongly in similar company at Pilmico and has good chance. Why Tarry can improve on his poor recent races.

Third Race—Fine Airs was installed a hot favorite, running with this kind at Pimlico, and should redeem his poor performance today. English Harry is a possible good thing; watch the betting. Simoon was outclassed last out but has a chance at this level.

Fourth Race—Morstep was a close second to Outdone in the Sagamore after forcing the early pace. Meets claiming platers here and is well placed. Top Man was a good thing his only start in New York and may supply most of the contention. Selma Lad showed speed in New York, has good money chance.

Fifth Race—Mr. Canron has been a consistent money horse in stakes this fall, is nicely weighted, and should like this track. Has the edge in an open race. Conquer has been freshened up and was closing well in a sprint opening day. Honey Cloud is good and may surprise.

Sixth Race—Bounding Count was well liked running with this company last out and was closing in the stretch. Has the edge with these. Bosopi was a strong finisher in a handicap at the Foxcatcher Hounds meet over the turf. Chance at a price. James Boy was opening day, is in form and likes the track.

Seventh Race—Wrenace was a hot favorite with the same kind opening day, goes a longer route today and should get up for winning honors. Wispy won two heats at Pimlico and will be on edge for a good effort. Mad Frump is a recent winner and should like this oval.

Best bet—Morstep.

William and Mary Campus Adither; Wampo Is A.W.O.L.

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 18 (AP). The said campus of the ancient and honorable College of William and Mary was deeply adither today.

Students with frantic haste organized searching parties and combed the town and the surrounding highways and byways for Wampo, the college's pony mascott, tolen last night from his stable.

There was no one who would come forthrightly forward and accuse any particular party of the theft, but—

Last year, a few days before the annual Thanksgiving Day football game between William and Mary and the University of Richmond, students from the latter institution descended on Williamsburg and kidnaped what they thought was Wampo, but later proved to be another pony, substituted by crafty William and Mary students.

Whoever visited the stable last night made no such mistake. This time the spirited away the real Wampo.

Ironically enough, the William and Mary students had planned to hide Wampo in a safe place today and keep him there until Thanksgiving.

Scores Neck Victory Over At Play

Pays $4.50 Ticket Brown Moth Shows Double Is $85.20 $23.70 Shot Wins

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—Aethelwold, bred up Frederick way, added his third purse of the fall season in this State by taking down the main money in The Meadow Purse, outstanding event on the today's card. With Jockey George Seabo, his regular rider in the saddle, the Challenger 2d colt, held a neck advantage over At Play while under a whipping drive. Third money in the field of six, operating over the mile and 70 yards route, went to D. J. Sullivan's Brown Moth. No Ending, carrying good support, finished last.

Aethelwold, a maiden when it arrived at Havre De Grace in September, is one of the most improved horses hereabouts and his ability was not a secret among the crowd of 8,000. It was bet down to a $4.50 mutuel and stepped the distance in 1:47.

Double Pays $85.20

No Ending was first to show in front, with At Play bringing up the rear as the field reached the clubhouse turn. Brown Moth then disposed of No Ending to take command and set a good pace into the stretch. Aethelwold had been close under wraps and, once turned loose, forged to the front. But from the rear of the field came At Play with a bold rush and Jockey Seabo was forced to go to the whip on Aethelwold. The game colt held his own in the final yards to save the decision.

A group of 146 customers cashed the daily double on One Tenth and Dona Dulcin which paid an $85.20 mutuel.

A photo finish marked the opening event, with the King Ranch's One Tenth nosing Mrs. A. J. Abel's Sir Mowlee out of first money in the field of a dozen maidens. Both had trouble in the early stages, and Sir Mowlee looked all the part of the winner before One Tenth closed with a bold rush. Key Man was third in front of a dead heat for fourth money between Cariel and Coronado. One Tenth was a $5.60 favorite.

Ghost Queen Victor

Dona Dulcin, a graduate of the half milers, defeated a cheap field in the second race. With Eddie De Camillis in the saddle, she finished a length in advance of Bright Chance, a field horse. Third money went to Playing Dan. Except for being headed by Resurrection, a horse which broke down in the running, Dona Dulcin had things her own way. It paid $23.70.

The favorite players scored their second success of the day in the third race when Jockey Bobby Merritt brought a tiring Holiday Tea to the wire a half length in front of Ann Moylee, a field horse. Ken's Mom was third in the group of 12 going 6 furlongs. The winner paid $5.50.

Ghost Queen, a filly with a keen liking for this track, ran a powerful race to win the Princess Anne Purse, fourth on the program. Under good handling by Jockey A. Schmidl, the daughter of Dunlin withstood a driving finish to score by a half length over Toddle On, with Fair Knightess third. The winner paid $15.

Wealthy Jockey Of Gay 90s Now Near Death, Broke

Miami, Fla., Nov. 18 (AP).—A shabby, penniless old man who identified himself as Jimmie Martin, 73, famous jockey who rode for Queen Victoria and "Diamond Jim" Brady, lay in a hospital today near death from heart disease.

Papers in Martin's pockets bore out his identification.

He was brought to the hospital after he had collapsed on the highway near the northern city limits and said he had hitchhiked here from West Palm Beach.

Advancing years forced Martin after 21 years in the saddle. He had a fortune of half a million dollars, but it was wiped out 1929. Since then he has followed the horses from track to track, eking out a meager living.

Army Picked Over Tigers

Service Team Light Trails in Series 35,000 to See Tilt

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 18.—(AP).—A light Army eleven was favored to beat Princeton's football team tomorrow in the Tiger's season finale which is expected to draw a crowd of 35,000.

It will be the first time Army has played Princeton here since football relationships were established between the two institutions in 1893, and the first time the two have met in 30 years. In an eight-game series that ended in 1905 Army did not win once, but three games were ties.

Under Cavalry Captain Bill Wood, a new coach, Army has won six of eight games this season, its victory over Harvard being outstanding. Princeton takes the field bolstered by a 20 to 7 victory over Yale last week and confident its sophomore passer, Dave Allerdice, has enough sharp-shooting left to nullify Army's fast attack.

The probable line-ups:

Dobson	L.E.	Meyerhols
Stella	L.T.	Tierney
Engstrom	L.G.	Herring
Little	R.G.	Worth
Mather	R.T.	Bokum
Sullivan	R.E.	Stanley
Frontczak	Q.B.	Allerdice
Wilson	L.H.	Daniel

Referee—W. G. Cromwell (Swarthmore). Umpire—A. H. Black (Pittsburgh). Head linesman—B. L. Eberts (Catholic). Field judge—George Vergara (Notre Dame). Time of game, 2 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Cotton Off December 8.60

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Cotton turned easier late today in sympathy with heaviness of stocks after early steadiness. March sold off from 8.54 to 8.45 and closed at the low. Final quotations were 3 to 6 points net lower.

The market opened with near months steady and distant deliveries easy. Widening of the apparent discount of next October contracts under December to about 90 points, however, tended to lessen pressure in the late months. December liquidation was attracted as that month advanced to a level practically even with average quotations in Southern spot markets. With the market thus losing the recent leadership of firmness in December, scattered liquidation depressed prices during the afternoon.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was steady early today on covering but reacted under increased liquidation and Southern selling, promoted by the disappointing action of lard.

Final prices were 4 to 6 points net lower with sales of 134 contracts. December closed 7.50; January, 7.62; March, 7.73; May, 7.84; July, 7.91.

Associated Gas Output

New York, Nov. 18.—For the week ended November 11, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 92,623,998 units. This is an increase of 3,209,491 units or 3.6 per cent above production of 89,414,507 units for the comparable week a year ago.

Wheat Prices Yield With Securities

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Assertions that removal of England's wheat tariff might apply to all exporting countries, not alone the United States, influenced a drop in Chicago prices today.

The fall, amounting to ⅞ of a cent a bushel, was attributed largely also to downturns of securities, notwithstanding that securities weakness appeared to be associated with Germany's recall of her Ambassador at Washington. It was commented that ordinarily such political news had an opposite effect on grains from that on securities.

Failure of overseas demand for United States wheat to show any expansion was an additional drawback, and so likewise were liquidating sales of Chicago December contracts on which grain can be delivered within two weeks.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅜ to ¾ lower compared with yesterday's finish. December 64@64⅛, May 66¼@66⅜; corn, ⅛ to ⅛ down, December 47⅛@47¾, May 51¼@51⅛; oats, unchanged to ⅛ off; rye, unchanged to ¼ up, and provisions showing 5 to 10 cents decline.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 18.—Stock exchange traders were cheered by signing of the Anglo-American trade agreement and the market as a whole benefited today. Strong features were textile, tobacco, distilling and motor shares. Transatlantic securities closed fractions to a point up and British government funds and foreign bonds held steady.

Paris.—The bourse closed with a weak tone today and trading was small. French rentes lost 20 to 230 centimes and Bank of France finished 350 francs down. Sues Canal was active and firm, adding 140 francs. Industrial issues were mixed.

Liverpool.—Near-month cotton futures held steady today, while new-crop positions eased, and final quotations were 3 points up to 5 lower. Bombay selling and hedging was absorbed by local buyers. Old-crop contracts eased early on repeal of import duty on all wheats, which tended to restrict demand. Prices rallied later and closed at ¼d to ⅝d net advance on a better milling demand.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

No More Follies

It may be all very well to treat the outcome of early season football games with a light and sometimes ludicrous touch, but the season is moving toward the end, the teams are driving down the stretch, traditional rivals are meeting today and two days next week—and coaches are fighting to hold their jobs.

VIDMER.

So the time for levity is behind us and if it is possible to view the future with a semblanceof seriousness, here goes.

HARVARD AT YALE—From the performances of the season, Harvard should rule a heavy favorite. Dick Harlow has done a splendid coaching job, taking a team that lost its first four games, developing its intricate system slowly and bringing it down for its final fray riding the wave of three straight victories. On the record it should have little trouble beating a Yale team that started badly and only once displayed the possibilities that the squad promised to develop at the start. That was in a losing game against Michigan.

This Yale team has won only a single game and the most disastrous season in nearly 20 years is in prospect. But it may be just that impending disaster that will rally the Blue, bring them up to the heights for their one last fling and produce a stunning upset. There have been shifts in the Yale line-up for this game with Harvard. Boys who have been sitting on the bench, eager to do a job on the field are to receive their chance. It may work wonders.

But Harvard still must rule the choice.

Mutual Balance

Army at Princeton—It may be that the Cadets, keenly conscious that they will be facing their traditional foe from Annapolis a week away, will go into the game with the Tigers at a psychological disadvantage. It may be that Princeton, having beaten Yale last week, will be unable to arouse itself to another stiff test that doesnt 'mean as much at Nassau Hall.

Much will depend on the mental, rather than the physical balance in this contest. Both have good, strong teams. Not their best, but at least representative. Possibly the fact that the Army had an easy game last week against Chattanooga while Princeton was keyed to a high pitch in its deep desire to beat the Blue will swing the tide toward the Cadets.

Syracuse at Columbia—This should be a battle above the clouds, with slinging Sid Luckman flinging passes for the Lions and Sharpshooting Sidat-Singh filling the air with footballs for Syracuse. Both teams depend on their passing attack, rather than their running games, and at least it should be a spectacular show from the spectators' point of view.

basketball squads have always ranked with the East's top fives.

St. John's inaugurated a revolutionary academic program based on study of approximately 100 classics in 1937. The whole curriculum is based on study and discussion of the 100 great books in an effort to return to a true liberal arts tradition and get away from the specialization of modern American colleges.

President Barr's announcement said in part:

"When the St. John's program was inaugurated in September of last year, nobody expected it to find the proper support from the semiprofessionalized syste mof intercollegiate athletics which American colleges have developed in recent years.

"The policy of the college requires the subordination of extracurricular activities to the main educational purposes.

"St. John's fortunately possessed two unusual coaches in Valentine Lentz and John Donohue who before the new program (A. P. S) had been inaugurated had already developed intramural athletics to a degree unusual in an American college.

"During the period in which the athletic program was being studied, it was decided to follow a program substantially like that of other colleges. Prudence suggested that until an appropriate system was devised the usual program should continue, but with less emphasis on intercollegiate sports and . . . without games played for the 'gate.'"

Episcopal In Title Tilt

At Woodberry Forest Play This Afternoon Will Be 38th Meeting

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 17.—Episcopal High School tries for its third straight State prep school grid title tomorrow afternoon, engaging the formidable Woodberry Forest eleven at Orange in the season's finale for both teams. The contest is the thirty-eighth engagement in a series that was inaugurated in 1900.

Episcopal needs a win over the Orangemen to retain the State title it won last year and shared with St. Christopher's School of Richmond in 1936, while a defeat or tie for the Maroons will shift the crown over St. Christopher's. Both the Maroons and the Richmonders are undefeated in the State race.

The Maroons go into the fray with a record of five victories, one defeat and one tie, while Woodberry has won eight out of six games. A loss to St. Christopher's knocked the Orangemen out of the title race, but they would like nothing better than to spoil their rivals' score for a third straight title, and at the same time even up the traditional series at 18 games apiece. Two contests have ended in tie since the series was inaugurated.

Judging by past performances, the contest should produce one of the best passing battles seen in the State this year. Little "Stumpy" Craighill, Episcopal quarterback, has just about gained the reputation as the State's best prep school passer, while Harris Covington, Woodberry halfback and cocaptain, is also ranked with the leading aerial artists in the Old Dominion. Both teams have rolled up most of their points on passes in previous games.

Episcopal's starting line-up will probably include Ben Dulany and Tom Todd, ends; Capt. Charlie Barrett and Jim Porter, tackles; Buster Robertson and Kabler, guards; Billy Suhling, center; "Stumpy" Craighill, quarterback; "Red" Bradfield and John Young, halfbacks, and Stanley Woodward, fullback.

George Washington High School brings its home grid season to a close tomorrow night, when the junior varsity and 125-pound elevens entertain like teams from Central High in a double-header at the G. W. Stadium. The kick-off is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

The G. W. 125-pound team, known as the Cubs, will have as its goal an undefeated season, having come out on top in all four games to date. They hold a pair of decisions over Episcopal High School's midget team, while they have also trounced St. Alban's and the Anacostia's Boys' Club. The locals are coached by George Tyler, former Emory & Henry College ace.

George Washington's junior varsity, tutored by Willis Benner, of Maryland University fame, has won two out of three games to date, defeating Fredericksburg's Jayvees and the Bullis Prep "B" team, and losing to the National Training School varsity eleven.

Duke Faces N. C. State

Eyes 4th S. C. Title Game Heads Program V. M. I. vs. Roanoke

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Duke University's heavily armored Blue Devils, one stride away from their fourth Southern Conference football championship in six years, will meet North Carolina State at Durham in the loop's standout game tomorrow.

Fulfilling forecasts of an easy triumph, Duke would complete its circuit card with five family scalps, including a win over North Carolina's 1937 champions, for undisputed possession of the 1938 title. It would mean that only twice since the deep Dixie members of the Southern withdrew to form the Southeastern Conference has Duke reliquished its position as the dominating gridiron power in the conference.

Two loop squads will go up against the East's leading elevens when Maryland entertains undefeated Georgetown and South Carolina engages Fordham, which was played to a scoreless standstill last week by North Carolina.

Virginia Military Institute will meet Roanoke's Maroons, one of the strongest small college teams in the conference area. The Citadel met Erskine today.

Other circuit members will be idle tomorrow in preparation for renewal of traditional rivalries on Thanksgiving Day.

Most ancient of these include the North Carolina-Virginia scrap at Charlottesville. Other venerable scraps are Clemson-Furman, the V. P. I.—V. M. I. military classic, Wake Forest—Davidson, William and Mary—Richmond and Washington and Lee—Maryland.

One intersectional engagement will bring the Carnegie Tech team which humbled Pittsburgh to Raleigh for a meeting with N. C. State.

The conference season will reach a grand climax a week from tomorrow when Duke makes its big bid for national honors against Pittsburgh at Durham.

A Review of The Army-Navy Games Since 1890

Ever since that Thanksgiving Day on November 27, 1890, when Navy beat Army, 24 to 0, Hugh R. Riley has been observing the battles of the two service teams. In Sunday's Post he reviews the games of the past. He tells about never-to-be-forgotten games, about great Navy players like Hugh Douglas, Jack Dalton, Jonas Ingram; about Army heroes like Dennis Michie. If you're an "old-timer," you'll want to reminisce with Hugh Riley. If you're a new-comer, you'll want to get acquainted with the background. Riley's article will appear in

Southern Tornado Kills 1, Hurts 3

New Orleans, Nov. 18 (AP).—Sweeping northeastward into Mississippi from Louisiana this afternoon, a tornado killed a colored woman, injured three men, derailed freight cars, ripped a roof off a school and demolished a number of buildings.

At Centerville, Miss., Ruby Thomas was crushed to death in her home wrecked by the wind, and at Mounds, La., the wind upset half a dozen freight cars. Three colored men were hurt when the wind blew their motor truck against a bridge at Krotz Springs, La.

At Auburn, Miss., the tornado tore almost the entire roof off a school building while about one hundred children were at their desks. No one was injured by the hurtling wood.

REFR

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

A lot of people think I'm crude because I don't go for antique furniture. As far as I'm concerned, modern furniture not only looks better—it's a whole lot more comfortable to sit in.

Some time ago, I bought an antique chair thinkin' maybe I might get used to it and form a taste for it. The other day I happened to go into the parlor and when I saw that antique chair sittin' there, I called the housekeeper in and I says "Look at that chair—the seat is covered with dust!" The housekeeper says "Well, why shouldn't it be—nobody has set in the blamed thing for months!"
